Memory of the Dead.

Many ages ago the eloquent Pericles, in an oration in honor of the hero-dead who fell fighting for the liberties of Greece, declared in true and burning words the good of doing honor to the memory of the noble dead. It was not that they — immortal in their deeds — needed temple or column to perpetuate their fame or reward their virtues, but because the living, by thus spurring emulation of the good and heroic dead, inspired and ennobled themselves. Their homage was proof that they were not ungrateful, nor insensible to the deeds that constitute glory and renown. No wreath is given, and no monument reared by a nation to the memory of its illustrious dead, but it blossoms with good for the living through all future time. Virtue is encouraged, patriotism kindled, and all that is noble in our nature inspired to action, by this homage to the greatness and goodness of our race.

P R E F A C E .

"Time corrodes our epitaphs and buries our very tombstones."

The practice of erecting memorials of some kind is almost coeval with the existence of the human race, but at what precise date epitaphs were first introduced, and by what nation, is involved in obscurity. The first we have been able to find is that about 876 B.C., when Sardanapalus, the last King of the Assyrians, ordered the following inscription to be engraved on his tomb, which was found at Anchiale in the time of Alexander, 543 years later:—

"Sardanapalus built Anchiale and Tarsus in one day. Go, Passenger, eat, drink, and rejoice, for the rest is nothing."

Epitaphs have long been declared as a means of communication between the living and the dead; a means of instruction as well as a reminder of our mortality. It is that we may make acquaintance with those who have lived before us, to inquire into their habits, their peculiarities, to investigate their history, which is not the least interesting object of the student and the antiquary, and to the biographer they are legitimate sources of inquiry.

The importance of monuments and inscriptions cannot be too strongly stated. But for these, many persons, as well as events worthy of remembrance, would have been forgotten. In the early days of epitaphial writings, inscriptions were prohibited except upon the monuments of illustrious persons; but now it is the universal custom among all classes of people to adopt them.

An epitaph to the honor of the dead has ever been regarded as of all praise the most noble and the most pure, especially when it expresses the character and actions of the good. Private virtues are as much entitled to this homage as public ones, and the title of a good parent, a good friend, and a good citizen is worthy of being engraved on brass or marble. Thus the tomb of a good man may in some degree be made to supply the want of his presence, and attach a veneration to his memory, and prove a benefit by his example. "Records on tombstones," says Leigh Hunt, "are introducers of the living to the dead, makers of mortal acquaintances; and 'one touch of nature,' in making the whole world kin, gives them the right of speaking like kindred to and of one another."

An eminent writer says. "When I properly look upon the tombs of the great, every emotion of envy dies within me, — when I read the epitaphs of the beautiful, every inordinate desire goes out, — when I see the grief of parents for children, my heart melts with compassion. — and yet, when afterwards I have beheld the tombs of parents themselves. I see the vanity of grieving for those that we must follow, — when I see kings lying, perhaps, by those who deposed them, — when I consider rivals who are placed side by side, or the great men who divided the world with their contests and disputes, in the same situation, I reflect with sorrow and astonishment on the little competitions, factions, and debates of mankind, — and finally, when I read the several dates on the tombs of some who died recently and some who died many years ago, I consider that great day when we shall be all cotemporaries and make our appearance together."

The author of this work has for a long time been exceedingly interested in collecting memorials of persons who have been distinguished as citizens as well as in the annals of fame, and whose memory should be cherished with a reverence due to their position.

Among the many places that the writer has visited, none has exceeded in interesting associations that of Plymouth and of "Burial Hill," and as the interest attached to this beautiful spot, once trodden by the steps of our early fathers, has become so universal, the long-cherished purpose of preserving the memorials of this locality has at last been realized, and the results are now offered to the public in this volume, with the hope that all may find as much personal gratification in its perusal as has the writer in its compilation.

Epitaphs descriptive of the personal character and social lives of those who lie beneath them are interesting and instructive, especially when drawn with truth and discrimination, and the advice given to the living in many of them are worthy of more than a passing thought. It would seem but natural that in a burial ground found in the oldest town of New England, the grave-stones should be the earliest to be found anywhere; but such is not the case. There are found elsewhere many whose records antedate those on Burial Hill, but none more interesting. Those buried here are mostly descendants of the early Pilgrims, as will appear by a careful perusal of the index at the end of this volume.

Here there are not only single graves representing a family, but whole households, — parents, brothers, sisters, children, and grandchildren, — all grouped together in immediate proximity; these, united in life, are not separated in death. Among these occupants of the soil may be found persons of prominence as well as those from the ordinary walks of life. Here rest the remains of many of the earliest settlers of the colony and children of the next generation, none of whom are now living. Here, too, may be found ministers who led the devotions of the sanctuary near by, which, for many years, was the only church in the town, and those who, by their lengthy terms* of faithful pastoral duties, manifested an interest in their fellow-worshippers, and desired to remain in their midst after death.

Here moulders the dust of several prominent physicians who completed their terms of usefulness to their fellow-townsmen, and lie within this sacred enclosure beside those whom even their skill could not save.

Here also may be found the names of those who were called to take an active part in the councils of the nation when the country was in peril during the revolution, and a long list of those who died in their country's service in the late rebellion.

Many also who have lost their lives on the perilous sea have found their final resting-place beneath the turf in these grounds.

At the time of commencement in copying these epitaphs, nearly forty years since, there were a large number of badly broken and defaced grave-stones lying about the ground. Since the work was begun a still larger number of slates have given way to the ruthless storms of years, or have been removed and others of a more imposing kind have taken their places, in the form of marble monuments and tablets or enduring granite. This will account for some of the inscriptions being found in different places in the volume, as the earlier ones are printed as found on the slate stones which afterward were removed, and on the new monuments the same names and dates were placed.

* Rev. Dr. Kendall was pastor of the First Church for nearly sixty years.

There are also a large number of inscriptions herein for which no stone can be found. The list of such will render this work the more valuable, as it will preserve the names of many which otherwise would have been forgotten.

It was originally intended to print these epitaphs to the year 1858, but time has wrought so many changes, and so many additions have been made since that date, it was deemed advisable to bring them to the present time. Great pains have been bestowed in the copying, and it is believed the results will be of great value to the antiquary, the genealogist, and the historian, as well as to the public at large.

It will be noticed that much labor and expense have been bestowed on this work in illustrating many of the monuments which it is thought would add much to the interest as well as value to the volume.

The author would respectfully acknowledge the kind assistance and encouragement he has received from many friends in Plymouth as well as elsewhere, during the progress of this work, and would especially mention Hon. William T. Davis, late president of the Pilgrim Society, as well as historian of Plymouth; Dr. Thomas B. Drew, curator of the Pilgrim Society at Pilgrim Hall; also to the family of the late William S. Russell, Esq., who did much in preserving the historical records of Plymouth, and publisher of "Recollections of the Pilgrims;" also to David Pulsifer, Esq., the well-known antiquary of Boston.

To Captain Charles C. Doten, editor of the "Old Colony Memorial," he is indebted for the free use of files of that paper; and to his son, Charles M. Doten, Esq., correspondent of the Boston Herald, for the kindly assistance rendered, he tenders his hearty thanks.

INTRODUCTION.

BURIAL HILL.

NEXT to the famous rock on which the Pilgrim Fathers landed there is nothing of more interest to the many thousands of visitors to the old town of Plymouth than the above named locality. The stranger upon his arrival in town, whether by steamboat or rail, cannot fail to notice, directly in the rear of the main street, a beautiful elevated spot of ground appropriated to the purposes of burials. There rest the remains of many of the early settlers of the old colony and their descendants for several generations.

This commanding and elevated ground was early selected by the pilgrims, while reconnoitering for a place on which to locate, as appears by their records, viz. :—

“On the other side of the river also much Corne-ground cleared; in one field is a great hill, on which wee poynt to make a platform and plant our ordnance, which will command all round about. From thence we may see into the Bay, and farre into the Sea, and we may see thence Cape Cod.”

This hill is one hundred and sixty-five feet above the level of the sea, and contains about eight acres.

This was their first measure of precaution against any sudden attack of the Indians, and served as a protection for the two rows of dwellings they had designed to construct.

At a little later date, in 1622, in consequence of threatened hostility from Canonicus, the distinguished and powerful sachem of the Narragansett Indians, it appears they erected a larger fort, and so built it in the interests of economy as to answer for protection from the natives as well as for a place of worship.

“This somer they builte a fort with good timber, both strong and Comly, which was of good defence, made with a flate rofe and battlments, on which their ordnance were mounted, and wher they kepte constante watch, espetically in time of danger. It served them allso for a meeting house, and was fitted accordingly for that use.”—Bradford.

OLD PILGRIM FORT AND MEETING HOUSE.

For a full account of this hill as it appeared a few years later, we find the following in a letter written by Isaac De Rasieres, a French Protestant, to Gov. Bradford in 1627:—

“New Plymouth lies on the slope of a hill stretching east towards the sea-coast, with a broad street about a cannon shot of eight hundred [yards] long, leading down the hill, with a [street] crossing in the middle, northwards towards the rivulet, and southwards to the land. The houses are constructed of hewn planks, so that their houses and court-yards are arranged in very good order, with a stockade against a sudden attack; and at the ends of the streets there are three wooden gates. In the centre, on the cross street, stands the Governor's house, before which is a square enclosure, upon which four patereros [steen-stucken] are mounted, so as to flank along the streets. Upon the hill they have a large square house, with a flat roof, made of thick sawn planks, stayed with oak beams, upon the top of which they have six cannons, which shoot iron balls of four and five pounds, and command the surrour'ing country. The lower part they use for their church, where they preach on Sundays and the usual holidays. They assemble by beat of drum, each with his musket or firelock, in front of the captain's door; they have their cloaks on, and place themselves in order, three abreast, and are led by a sergeant without beat of drum. Behind comes the Governor, in a long robe; beside him, on the right hand, comes the preacher with his cloak on, and on the left hand the captain with his side-arms and cloak on, and with a small cane in his hand; and so they march in good order, and each sets his arms down near him. Thus they are constantly on their guard night and day."

Thus did our forefathers worship God—with a Bible in one hand and a sword or a musket in the other.

Again in September, 1642, according to the records of the town, repairs were made to the fort:—

"It is agreed that every man shall bring two peeces more of viii. foote long to finish the fortyfycacon on the fort hill, and that Richard Church shall speedily make the carriage for another piece of ordnance."

And on the 23d of September, 1643, a watch was established at Plymouth, and "it was agreed upon that there shall be a watch house forthwith built of brick, and that Mr. Grome shall sell us the bricks for xi. s. p. thousand." This is the first instance where bricks are mentioned in the colony.

Again in February, 1676, there were fears of an invasion of the natives under King Philip and his tribe, afterwards known as King Philip's war, which caused the citizens of the town to make more extensive preparations for defence, as appears by the following vote:—

February 19th, 1676. "It was ordered by the Towne that there shal be forthwith a fortification built upon the fort hill att Plymouth; to be an hundred foot square, the pallasadoes to be ten foot and a halfe longe; to be sett two foot and a halfe in the Ground; and to be sett against a post and a Raile; every man is to doe three foot of the said ffence of the fortification; the pallasadoes are to be battened on the backsyde one against every two, and sharpened on the topps, to be accomplished by every male in each family from sixteen yeares old and upwards, and that there shal be a watch house erected within the said ffence or fortification, and that the three peece of ordnance shal be planted within the said ffence or fortification.

"Agreed with Nathaniell Southworth to build the said watch house, which is to be sixteen foot in length and twelve foot in breadth and eight foot studd, to be walled with board, and to have two flores, the uper flore to be six foot above the lower flore; and hee is to batten the walls and to make a smal paire of staires in it and to frame two smal windowes below, to make two gebles to the Roofe on each syde one, to Cover the Roofe with shingle; onely the frame to be brought to the place att the Townes Charge; and for the said work hee is to have eight pounds to be paid either in money or other pay equivalent."

In the year 1679 this watch house was granted to Samuel Jenney "to dwell in, or remove when he pleaseth." The remains of the old fort were sold to William Harlow, and formed part of his dwelling-house. The cannon were used in Revolutionary times for the defence of Coles' hill, and afterwards, as we learn, sold, to be wrought into more harmless forms of human use.—Town Records, Vol. 1. p. 83.

It seems that this hill was used not only as a central point for protection from any sudden attack upon the town, but as a place of burial from 1676, the date whence it ceased to be used as a fort.

BURIAL HILL, PLYMOUTH.

The first mention of it as a burial place was in 1698, when Chief Justice Sewall, holding court in Plymouth, says in his diary, "I walk out in the morn to see the mill, then turn up to the graves, come down to the meeting-house, and seeing the door partly open went in and found a very convenient opportunity to pray."

And again in the deed of the lot of land, where "Davis Building" now stands, from Nathaniel Howland to Francis Le Baron, of the same year the seat of the Le Baron family.—Davis Ancient Landmarks.

The following is a description of the Hill as it appears to-day, and of those who visit the same for the first time, as well as the impressions of a stranger from foreign lands.

"The 'Burying' Hill is the most remarkable spot in Plymouth. From whatever side we approach the town, it rises conspicuously above all its buildings; a lofty green mound, covered with dark gray tombstones, the first place to receive the rays of the sun, and the last upon which they linger.

"Let us ascend to it by the narrow foot-path from the head of Leyden-street, worn deeply to the thick and mossy turf, and, seated on one of the tombstones, look out upon the surrounding scene. What a Sabbath stillness reigns buried among its leafy groves; though the curling smoke tells of many a cheerful home concealed amidst the foliage. It is morning, the tide is in, the wide expanse of the bay glitters with light, and a fresh and bracing sea-breeze pleasantly salutes us. The robin red-breast, a much larger bird than his elder brother in England, hopping from stone to stone, seems to haunt this fresh and breezy eminence. The view that it commands is pleasing from its wide expanse of sea and shore. But the spot whereon we stand, the cemetery, is itself the most striking feature of the scene.

"In wandering about this venerable place of sepulture, I was particularly struck with the longevity attained by a large proportion of its tenants. It is remarkable that many of those who survived the first winter, fatal to half their companions, and became accustomed to the climate, which, if keen and cutting, is remarkably pure and salubrious, should, with their immediate descendants, have lived to eighty, ninety, and, in some few instances, above even a hundred years of age.

"Such, in its main features, is the Burying Hill, the most venerable, if not the most beautiful, necropolis to be met with on the soil of America."—Bartlett's Pilgrim Fathers.

"When the modern pilgrim finds his way to Plymouth, and, with filial veneration, directs his steps to the sacred spot where rest the fathers of New England, he is peculiarly struck with the remarkable objects which are presented to his view. When he has ascended the high hill, and looks around upon the innumerable gravestones which affection has placed as the last tributes to the memory of departed parents, relatives and friends, he seeks in vain for any ancient memorial to mark the graves of the Mayflower pilgrims of 1620. In vain he inquires for the graves of those who came in the Fortune in 1621, in vain for those of the Ann and Little James, in 1623. In vain he asks, in vain he seeks. Of all these, Thomas Cushman alone of the Fortune, and Thomas Clark alone of the Ann, are remembered by tablets. Their graves alone were surely designated by gravestones on Burying Hill. One of the old comers, Phineas Pratt, was similarly remembered in the old burial-ground in Charlestown. Uncertain tradition, however, has attempted to point out the burial places of a few others, and modern memorials have been erected to their memory.

"In an elevated position in one part of this field of the dead may be seen the shaft erected in memory of William Bradford, not only emphatically the Governor of the Plymouth Colony, but the faithful chronicler of the Pilgrims, his associates in the great enterprise. In another direction is the large slab commemorating the life and services of the venerable John Howland; and still, in another portion of the field, the monument which the filial regard of the Cushman family has raised over the graves of their pious ancestor, the excellent Elder. These, indeed, are modern erections, but not the less honorable.

"The site upon Burying Hill on which the Cushman monument stands has hallowed family associations, and is not in itself entirely devoid of interesting recollections of a more general character. It is the identical spot selected for the burial place of Elder Cushman by his bereaved friends and religious associates; and beneath the turf which has grown for ages, and whose verdure has only now and then been disturbed, as a new tenant has been admitted to the community of the dead, to mingle ashes with those of the venerated sire, rest the remains of the earliest of this Pilgrim family, — the Cushmans. Around the Elder's humble grave were buried many of the Church, who, from their feelings of attachment, desired to be near him in death, as they had been with him in life; among these were the officers of the church, with whom he had for so many years ministered; but his pastor was not permitted to be with him in his long sleep, but is quietly reposing in the distant regions of the sunny South. From this spot the turf has now been removed, but the sacred remains are still there. The turf has given place to more enduring granite.

"While standing within this ancient cemetery, the stranger is forcibly struck with the appearance of the large number of monumental tablets and burial mounds which he notices on all sides, compared with the smaller number of buildings in the village at its base,—that the dwellings of the dead far outnumber the dwellings of the living. The immediate scene presents a vast assemblage of the past and a more limited population of the present—the quiet remains of other days above, and busy and bustling life of to-day below. Here is where the forefathers lie with their children of more than two centuries, gathered together in family clusters, awaiting the call of the last great day. And where could they lie more appropriately than in the chosen land of their American pilgrimage?

"Extending the eye beyond the hill at his feet, and beyond the village and a few sparsely scattered houses adjacent, the stranger will witness the placid and hospitable waters, formed into a safe and quiet harbor, by the almost surrounding headlands and projecting beaches. His attention will be drawn to the Gurnet, at the eastward, with its twin beacons, and to Saquish, noted for affording food for the almost famished voyagers; to Clark's Island, on the north, where the Pilgrims, after their arrival in their new home, first passed the Christian Sabbath in prayer; to the fields of Duxbury and the green elevation there, which bears the name of the redoubtable Captain Standish; to the lands of Kingston, where piously dwelt good Elder Cushman and his devoted Mary, beside their never-failing spring* of living water, and where they terminated their earthly pilgrimage; and to the meanderings of Jones's River, and Rocky Nook, and Plain Dealing; and more westerly, to the chain of undulating hills, upon the chief of which is the national monument to the Pilgrim Fathers, and to the fresh waters of Billington Sea, and the numerous crystal lakes of the townships. More southerly will be seen the Town Brook and Pilgrims' Spring, where the Pilgrims first quenched their burning thirst, and Watson's Hill, where first appeared human friendship, in the person of the almost civilized Massasoit. Further to the east, following the circuit, the villages of Wellingly and Eel River, and the far-famed beach, and the warning and inviting Manumet are seen rising nearly 400 feet above the ocean. Extending his vision across the bay, a distance of twenty-five miles, the white cliffs of Cape Cod appear as if suspended in mid-air by some secret enchantment of nature.

"All these the stranger sees; and he may also see, almost at his feet, the famous Leyden street, where were the first dwellings of the Pilgrims, and the Middle street, and the North street, lying parallel to each other, and at right-angles with and between the Main street and the Water street at the Water side, where were the first allotments of land; and he may see Forefathers' Rock, the place of landing, and Cole's Hill, where were laid to rest, during the first winter, half of the precious freight of the Mayflower. Well may we say to him, as he stands beside the graves of the Fathers;

" 'Stranger!—As from this sacred spot, hallowed by the remembrance of the true-hearted, who sleep beneath its turf, you cast your eyes around and view scenes unsurpassed in interest and beauty,—while you behold flourishing towns and villages abounding in industry, prosperity, and happiness, where once all was dreary, inhospitable, and desolate; think of the self-sacrificing forefathers, learn to emulate their virtues, and firmly resolve to transmit unimpaired, to the latest posterity, the glorious lessons of their noble examples.' "—Pilgrim Almanac.

* This spring on the premises of Samuel P. Cole, at Kingston, is well worth a visit; as near by the visitor can see where one of the old Pilgrims had a home. The electric cars take one quite near to the same.

EPITAPHS

BURIAL HILL,

PLYMOUTH.

A neat monument was erected on the site where, it has long since been ascertained, the remains of Governor Bradford were deposited. The monument consists of a solid block of granite, thirty inches square and eighteen inches thick, on a stone foundation. On the granite is a block of white marble twenty inches square and ten inches thick, on which is a white marble shaft, six feet high, in the form of a pyramid, fifteen inches square at the base, and eight inches square at the top, making the total height eight and one-half feet, erected in 1835 under the direction of Alden Bradford of Boston, late Secretary of State, a descendant of the Governor.

The following persons contributed to the same: Mrs. James De Wolf, of Bristol, R. I., Mrs. Collins, of Newport, wife of the late Lieutenant Governor of Rhode Island, Hon. John Davis, of Boston, LeBaron Bradford, of Plymouth, Capt. Gershom Bradford, of Duxbury, William J. A. Bradford, Duncan Bradford, George P. Bradford and Ezra Weston, Jr., Esq., of Boston.

Governor WILLIAM BRADFORD was born in Austerfield, a small and rather obscure village in the southerly border of Yorkshire, England, in March, 1588. His father then placed in care of his uncle Robert of Scrooby, a small village five miles only from Austerfield in Nottinghamshire, and near to the manor house of Brewster. His father was an husbandman, and William was brought up as an agriculturalist. He inherited considerable property from his father. At an early age he became an attendant upon the preaching of Richard Clifton, and became a member of his church, over which he and Robinson presided. Brought up to labor he received only a scanty education, although he was much inclined to literary pursuits. He became quite proficient in Dutch, Latin, French and Greek, and was a very devoted student of Hebrew, as "he wished to see with his own eyes the ancient oracles of God in their native beauty." He was fond of history and philosophy but theology was his favorite study. He early adopted the views of the separatist divines, with an enthusiasm peculiar to his nature, and having become at an early age a leading man in the community where he resided, at the age of eighteen he joined with those who emigrated to Holland, where the commercial spirit had tolerated free religious opinions. In this attempt the company was betrayed by the captain of the vessel in which they had embarked and they were thrown into prison in Boston, Lincolnshire, but he was soon liberated on account of his youth. In the spring of the following year he made another unsuccessful attempt, but finally succeeded and joined his brethren at Amsterdam. Here he learned the art of silk-dyeing. Upon arriving at the age of twenty-one years he came into possession of his estate in England, and engaged in commercial pursuits in which he was not successful.

After a residence of about ten years in Leyden, the church which had been formed by Mr. Robinson prepared to remove to America. In this movement Bradford engaged with that zeal with which he entered into everything. He embarked for England July 22, 1620, and on the sixth of September set sail from Plymouth with the first company of about 100 persons, in the Mayflower, arriving in sight of Cape Cod on the ninth day of November. While the vessel lay in Cape Cod Harbor, he became one of the foremost in the selection of a site for a settlement; and while he was on an exploring expedition, his wife fell overboard from the ship, December 7, 1620, and was drowned.

Soon after the death of Governor Carver, April 5, 1621, Bradford was elected to fill the vacancy as Governor of the Colony. He was annually elected to that office till 1657, excepting the years, 1633, '34, '36, '38, '44. He had then become conspicuous among the people for wisdom, piety, fortitude and benevolence.

He lived almost through the whole period of the English Commonwealth, and saw other flourishing colonies, the offspring of that at Plymouth, rising around him and forming the germ of an immense nation, by all of whom he was regarded with the love and veneration due to a patriarch, and in the words of an ancient writer he "was the very prop and glory of Plymouth Colony during the whole series of changes that passed over it." In the office of chief magistrate he was prudent, temperate and firm, and would suffer no person to trample on the laws, or to disturb the peace of the colony.

He wrote a history of "Plymouth plantation," beginning with the first formation of the church (in 1602, and ending with 1647) which was published by the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1856. After an infirm and declining state of health for a number of months, he was suddenly seized by an acute disease in May, 1657. In the night his mind was so enraptured by contemplating upon religious truth and the hopes of futurity, that he said to his friends in the morning, "The good Spirit of God has given me a pledge of my happiness in another world and the first fruits of eternal glory."

The next day, May 9, 1657, he was removed from the present state of existence, greatly lamented by the people not only of Plymouth, but in the neighboring colonies.

"The ninth of May, about nine of the clock,

A precious one God out of Plymouth took:

Governor Bradford then expired his breath."—Morton.

Governor Bradford's first wife was Dorothy May; his second wife was Alice Southworth, widow of Edward Southworth, 1623. He had one son by his first wife, William; Mercy and Joseph, by his second wife, from whom has sprung a large and honorable list of descendants, many of whom have lived and died in the Old Colony, and led active, useful lives, and have been highly respectable, as well as prominent in public life in New England and without her limits.

Alice, the wife of Governor Bradford, was no doubt buried near this monument.

The Old Colony records have the following:

"On the 26th day of March, 1670, Mistress Alice Bradford, Seni'r, changed this life for a better, having attained to four score years of age or thereabouts. Shee was a godly matron, and much loued while shee lived, and lamented tho' aged when she died, and was honorably interred on the 29th day of the month aforesaid: at New Plimouth."

A few years since Hon. John Howland, who died November 5th, 1854, at the age of ninety-seven years and five days, President of the Rhode Island Historical Society, Providence, R. I., and a descendant in the fifth generation from John Howland, the Pilgrim, caused a grave-stone to be erected over the remains of his ancestor, consisting of a large slate-stone, upon which is the following inscription:—

2. Here ended the Pilgrimage of | JOHN HOWLAND and ELIZABETH his | wife. She was the dau'tr of Gov. Carver | They arrived in the Mayflower Dec. 1620; | they had 4 Sons & 6 dau'trs from whom | are descended a numerous posterity |

"1672 Feby 23^d JOHN HOWLAND of | Plymouth deccased, he lived to the age of 80 | yr's. He was the last man that was left of those | that came over in the Ship called the Mayflo- | wer that lived in Plymouth."—[Plymouth Records.]

There is a painted sign board at the side of this gravestone containing the following inscription:—

The grave of | JOHN HOWLAND | died | Feb. 25, 1672.

It has been frequently published that Mr. Howland married a daughter of Governor Carver. This we think is a mistake. In Bradford's History we find that John Howland married Elizabeth, the daughter of John Tillie. Mr. Howland was a distinguished man, and devoted to the interests of the Colony, both in relation to its civil and religious institutions. He was Deputy and Assistant for several years. His early residence was on Summer street, but afterwards removed to Rocky Nook, where he died. The remains of his cellar are visible a short distance north of the residence of the late Hezekiah Ripley.

The colonial records say, "He was a godly man and an ancient professor in the ways of Christ, and proved a useful instrument of good in his place." His descendants are quite numerous. The late Reverend John Howland of Carver, Mass., was grandson of Mr. Howland. He was the last man of them that came over in the Mayflower, who settled in Plymouth. On the passage to this country in the Mayflower the weather was tempestuous, and in a severe storm Mr. Howland fell overboard and came near losing his life. The following is a record of the accident in Bradford's own words:—

"And in one of them as they thus lay at hull, in a mighty storme, a lustie yonge man (called John Howland) coming upon some occasion above ye grattings, was, with a seale of ye shipe throwne into [ye] sea; but it pleased God y^t he caught hould of ye tope-saile halliards, which hunge over board, & rane out at length; yet he held his hould (though he was sundrie fadomes under water) till he was hald up by ye same rope to ye brine of ye water, and then with a boat hooke & other means got into ye shipe againe, & his life saved; and though he was something ill with it, yet he lived many years after, and became a profitable member both in church and comone wealthe."

3. Here Lyeth y^e Body | of EDWARD GRAY | Gent Aged About | 52 years & Depart^d | this life y^e Last of | June 1681.

Mr. GRAY came to this cuntry with his brother Thomas about 1643. Thomas removed to Tiverton, R. I., and Edward settled in Plymouth. His name frequently appears in the records of that town, and he became a large owner of real estate. By his habits of industry and good management, he acquired a large property, his estate having been estimated the highest in the colony, at one time amounting to £1250 sterling. He was a large owner of land at Rocky Nook, Kingston, where the old family mansion still stands on the old road leading from Plymouth to Kingston, and is now owned and occupied by his descendants.

Beside his gravestone is a painted sign erected by the town of Plymouth, as follows :—

The grave of | EDWARD GRAY, | Died | June 1681.

4. Here lyes buried | y^e body of Mr. | WILLIAM CROWE |
Aged Abovt 55 years | who dec^d. January | 1683.

He married Hannah, daughter of Josiah and Margaret (Bourne) Winslow, a brother of Governor Edward Winslow, in 1665. She afterward became the wife of John Sturtevant, and died March, 1708-9.

Beside this gravestone is the following inscription on a painted signboard :—

The grave of | WILLIAM CROWE | Died | Jan. 1683.

6. Here Lyes y^e Body of |
Mr THOMAS CLARK Aged |
98 Years departed | this life
March | y^e 24th 1697.

"It is a well received tradition that this ancient man was the mate of the Mayflower, and the one who first landed on the island in Plymouth Harbor which bears his name. Little is known of the life and circumstances of the mate of the Mayflower; his name is not among the signers of the original compact, nor mentioned among the first settlers. It may therefore be conjectured, that he was considered merely as an officer of the ship, and that he returned to England in her with Captain Jones, and subsequently came over and settled in this town. We find his name among those who received allotments of land in 1624; and he also shared in the division of cattle in 1627. He resided at Eel River, and it is supposed that his family were among the sufferers in the house of William Clark, when attacked by a party of savages, March 12, 1676. He being himself absent at meeting escaped, while eleven others were massacred and his son tomahawked, who ever after wore a silver plate on his head from which he was called Silver-Head Tom. Numerous lineal descendants from Thomas Clark now reside at Eel river in this town, and in other parts of the Old Colony. There is a handsome China mug whose pedigree is traced through the Clark family back to Thomas Clark, which had been presented to the cabinet of the Pilgrim Society by Betsey B. Morton, a descendant, and also a leathern pocket-book with the initials T. C. impressed on its cover, presented by Amasa Clark. These relics afford additional evidence that the mate of the Mayflower died in this town, and that his ashes rest in the grave in our burial place designated by a stone with the above inscription."

There is a sign board at the side of this gravestone on which is the following inscription :—

The grave of THOMAS CLARK | Died | March 24, 1697.

7. Here lyeth buried y^e body | of that precious servant of |
God, Mr THOMAS CUSHMAN, who, | after he had served his | generation according to | the will of God and | particularly the Church of | Plymouth for many years in | the office of a ruling
Elder, | fell asleep in Jesus Decm^r | y^e 10th 1691, and in y^e | 84th year of his age.

Elder CUSHMAN came to Plymouth in the "Fortune," in 1621. He was brought up and educated in the family of Governor Bradford, and was always his intimate and confidential friend. He served the church of Plymouth as Ruling Elder nearly 43 years, having been chosen April 6, 1649. His gravestone is on the southerly brow of the Hill in a beautiful locality commanding a full view of the harbor of Plymouth as well as the town, the green hills in the distance, and of the "Meeting House," where, for over seventy years he had prayed and worshipped. This gravestone was erected by the church in 1715, twenty-five years after his death, and is a plain slab of mica slate, probably imported from England. It is in a good state of preservation, and the inscription is still distinct and legible.

His wife was Mary, daughter of Isaac Allerton, who came over in the "Mayflower" the previous year.

Soon after his marriage he removed to "Rocky Nook" in Kingston, (then Plymouth). The locality of his house has often been visited by antiquarians and others interested in early Colonial matters. There is a famous spring of excellent water near his residence, that has received the title of "Elder Spring," near the railroad on land now owned by Mr. Samuel P. Cole in Kingston.

At the grave of Elder Cushman is a signboard of recent date, directing the visitors to the grounds to the grave of one of the most noted of the old Pilgrims.

The grave of | Eld. THOMAS CUSHMAN | Died | Dec. 10,

CUSHMAN MONUMENT.

On the 15th of August, 1855, the descendants of the Cushman ancestors and their relatives, met together to Plymouth, in honor of their venerated ancestors, Robert Cushman, the right hand of the Plymouth forefathers, and Elder Thomas Cushman, his son, who for about forty-three years acceptably served the church of the Pilgrims as Ruling Elder. On the following day the persons assembled from almost every State in the Union, visited the grave of their ancestor, the Elder, and before parting resolved to erect an enduring monument over the remains of this venerable man. This object was subsequently consummated; and on the 16th of September, 1858, in commemoration of the sailing of the Mayflower from Plymouth, in England, for the new home in New England, the monument was consecrated with becoming exercises and ceremonies.

The Cushman monument stands in a conspicuous position within the ancient cemetery of the Plymouth fathers, upon Burying Hill, within sight of the hospitable harbor where the Mayflower lay safely moored in the inclement winter of 1620; and also, of the far-famed solitary rock of that sandy shore whereon the forefathers first set foot on the memorable twenty-first of December, and almost beneath the drippings of the first Christian sanctuary in New England.

The monument is a massive and tasteful structure, built of smoothly hewn Quincy granite, of the finest and most durable quality, and is highly creditable to the skill and faithfulness of Messrs. C. R. & C. Mitchell, the contractors. Its form is that of an obelisk with plainly chamfered edges, having a Grecian base standing upon an ornamented pedestal, also chamfered to its base, and containing sunken panels; the pedestal rests upon two square plinths, and the whole structure upon blocks of hewn granite occupying the whole space enclosed by a quadrangular fence, constructed with large stone posts and substantial iron rails. The whole height of the monument, including the stone blocks on which it stands, is about twenty-seven and one-half feet; the base of the pedestal is about five feet square, and of the lowest plinth about eight feet. The space within the railing is about twelve feet square. The tablets, which contain the inscriptions in raised letters, occupy the four panels of the pedestal, and measure about thirty-six by twenty-two inches. They are of metallic bronze, and were cast at the foundry of Messrs. Henry N. Hooper & Co., in Boston.

The following are the inscriptions on the tablets:—

Rev. JOHN COTTON was born in Boston, March 13, 1640. Graduated at Harvard College, 1657. Settled pastor of the First Church in Plymouth, June 30, 1669. Dismissed, October, 5, 1697. Sailed for Charleston, S. C., Nov. 15, 1698. Preached in Connecticut and Martha's Vineyard, 1664 to 1667. He was eminent for his knowledge of the Indian language, and frequently preached to the aborigines at Plymouth in their native tongue. He revised and corrected Eliot's Indian Bible, printed at Cambridge in 1685. His residence was on the north side of Leyden street. His sons, John, Roland and Theophilus, were clergymen.

Hon. JOSIAH COTTON, son of the above Rev. John, was born in Plymouth, Jan. 8, 1680. Studied theology, but was not ordained over any church; taught school in Plymouth seven years; acquired a knowledge of the Indian language, and preached to the Indians of Plymouth and vicinity for a long time. He was author of an Indian grammar; became Clerk of the Inferior Court of Common Pleas, and afterward Judge of the same; was also Register of Deeds for the County of Plymouth. He died Aug. 19, 1756.

10. Here Lyeth | Buried ye Body | of JOSEPH | BART-
LETT who | Departed this | Life Aprill ye 9th | 1703 | In ye 38th
year | of His Age.

On the footstone are the following lines:

J. B.

*Thousands of years after blest Abell's fall,
Twas said of him being dead he speakth yet;
From silent grave methinks I hear a call,
Pray fellow mortal, don't your death forget
You that your eyes cast on this grave,
Know you a dying time must have.*

It is said by some elderly persons that the gravestone of Mr. BARTLETT was the first placed on Burial Hill, although by the records he died subsequent to Edward Gray. He was son of Joseph and Hannah (Fallowell) Bartlett, who was son of Robert Bartlett, a passenger in the Ann, in 1663, by Mary, a daughter of Richard Warren.

11. Here lyes ye body | of
Honourable Major | WILL-
IAM BRADFORD | who expired Feb^r ye 20th | 170³ Aged
71 years.

*He lived long but still was doing good,
& in his country's service lost much blood.
After a life well spent he's now at rest,
His very name and memory is blest.*

Major WILLIAM BRADFORD, son of the Governor, early obtained high distinction in the Colony, having been elected an Assistant and chief military commander soon after the decease of his father. He was a Major in the army, and was an active officer in King Philip's war. When the colonial government terminated, in 1692, he became Deputy Governor, and afterward a Counsellor of Massachusetts.

He had fifteen children, nine sons and six daughters. The late Ebenezer Cobb of Kingston, who lived to the remarkable age of 108 years, well remembered the funeral of Deputy Governor Bradford. The public road between Kingston and Plymouth was obstructed by deep snow, and the corpse was carried from his family residence near Jones' River, along the seashore, it being the expressed desire of the deceased to be buried near the body of his father. His tombstone indicates the spot where the Governor was probably buried, the father lying on the east side of the son, while Joseph lies in another row, northerly.

12. MARY GRAY dau to | JOHN & JOANNA | GRAY his wife | March 17th | 170³ | ye 16 year | of her age.

13. Here lyes ye body | of Mr FRANCIS LE BARRAN |
Phytician who | Departed this life | Augst ye 8th 1704 | In ye 36
year | of his Age.

Dr. FRANCIS LEBARON was a surgeon on a French privateer, fitted out at Bordeaux, and cruising on the American coast, was wrecked in Buzzard's Bay. The crew were carried to Boston as prisoners of war. Dr. LeBaron came to Plymouth, and having performed a surgical operation, the selectmen petitioned the executive, Lt. Governor Stoughton, for his liberation, that he might settle in that town. This was granted; and he married Mary Wilder, and practised medicine in Plymouth, where he died at the age of 36 years.

His religion was Roman Catholic. He made a donation of ninety acres of wood land to the town. He had a son, Lazarus, who was a physician in Plymouth for a long time.

It is probable that nearly all of this name in this country descended from Dr. LeBaron, and have become quite numerous and highly respected.

CALEB COOK, son of Jacob and Damaris (Hopkins) Cook, born March 29, 1651, and resided at Rocky Nook, Kingston. He will be remembered as the person connected with the death of King Philip. He was a soldier under the lead of Col. Benjamin Church, and while closely pressing the Indians, Cook, and an Indian named Alderman, of the Seaconet tribe were placed on duty to watch Philip, lest he should get out of a swamp, where he had hidden, and if possible to kill Philip. He soon had a chance, and fired at him, but his gun missed. He then bid Alderman to fire, and he soon became their victim, having been shot through the heart. Mr. Cook exchanged guns with the Indian, and the gun which did the fatal work has been kept in the Cook family till quite recently. The old flint lock was taken off and presented to the Massachusetts Historical Society. Part of the gun is in the Cabinet of Curiosities in Pilgrim Hall, Plymouth.

Graduated at Harvard College 1695; ordained as pastor of the Plymouth Church 1699, married Sarah, daughter of William and Hannah (Griswold) Clark 1698, and died leaving no children. The town supported his widow by annual grants to her during her life. He was the first minister buried on the hill. "He was a gentleman more inclined to the active, than the studious life; but should be remembered for his useful services as a minister, and for his exemplary life and conversation, being one of good memory, of quick invention, having excellent gift in prayer, and in occasional performances also excelling. But what can never be sufficiently commended, was the generosity of his spirit, and his readiness to help all that were in distress."

Elder THOMAS FAUNCE was the son of John and Patience (Morton) Faunce. Born 1647; married Jane daughter of William and Martha (Ford) Nelson 1672; ordained Deacon of the First Church of Plymouth, December 26, 1686, also Town Clerk of Plymouth from 1685 to 1723. His father having died when he was a child, Captain Thomas Southworth took him by the hand at the grave, led him to his own home, and from that time bestowed on him paternal affection. In the family of Mr. Southworth he was educated and instructed, and here his mind received the rudiments of those principles of humility and piety, by which he was so remarkably distinguished in after life. It has been related, that the Elder has often been heard to say that for this education he should have reason to bless God to all eternity. He was first chosen Deacon and afterwards Elder, and was the last who held that office. In those days the office of Elder was one of great consideration. An Elder was regarded as the virtual representative of the church, and on an equality with the Pastor. He was bound to keep a watchful eye over the doctrines preached as well as the principles and practices of the brethren.

The Elder's house stood on the west side of the road near Eel River bridge. His descendants are numerous, and are represented in the names of Kempton, Doten, Paddock and Finney, as well as by his own family name.

ISAAC LOTHROP Esq., was the son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Barnes) Lothrop; born 1707; married 1st, Hannah, daughter of Edmund Freeman, 1729; married 2nd, Priscilla (Thomas) widow of John Watson, 1733. He was a Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and his death was lamented throughout the county. At the opening of the Court, at the next term of the Court after his death, the Chief Justice, Nicholas Sever, and Peter Oliver, an Associate Justice of the Court, both expressed their great grief and sorrow with which the Court and bar were affected by the melancholy event, and observed that Col. Lothrop was held in profound regard as a Judge, and was greatly respected for his moral and Christian virtues. He possessed a large estate, and transacted extensive business in the mercantile line, in which he sustained an honorable and upright character. Few men have been more beloved, nor any whose death could diffuse more heartfelt sorrow among the poor, and in every social circle. He had five children, four sons and one daughter.

IN MEMORY OF

SEVENTY TWO SEAMEN, WHO
 PERISHED IN PLYMOUTH HAR-
 BOR ON THE 26th & 27th
 OF DECEMBER 1778, ON BOARD
 THE PRIVATE ARMED BRIG
 GENERAL ARNOLD OF TWEN-TY GUNS NUMBERING IN OFFICERS AND CREW ONE
 HUNDRED AND SIX PERSONS
 IN ALL, JAMES MAGEE OF
 BOSTON COMMANDER, SIXTY
 OF WHOM WERE BURIED ON THIS SPOT, AND TWELVE IN OTHER PARTS OF THE HILL.

The inhabitants of Plymouth were called to witness a most distressing catastrophe in the month of December, 1778, of which the following is a reliable account as published in the Boston Gazette, June 4, 1779:

"On Friday, the 25th ult., at six a. m., the wind to the westward, sailed from this port the brig General Arnold, James Magee, commander; and about meridian the wind chopped round to north-east, and looking likely for a gale, they thought best to put into Plymouth, and came to anchor in a place called the Cow-yard. On Saturday, the gale increasing, she started from her anchor and struck on the White Flat. They then cut both cable and masts away, in hopes to drive over; but she immediately bilged; it being low water, left her quarter-deck dry, where all hands got for relief. A schooner lying within hail heard their cries, but could not assist them. On Sunday the inhabitants were cutting ice most of the day before they got on board, when they saw seventy-five of the men had perished, and thirty-four very much frozen, which they got on shore and on Monday they got on shore and buried the dead. Great part of her stores, etc., will be saved. Some evil-minded persons have raised a report that she was plundered by the inhabitants, which is entirely false, as they behaved with the greatest humanity. The following are the persons taken off the wreck of the General Arnold, that survived the ship-wreck: Capt. James Magee, John Steel, Jotham Haughton, George Pilsbury, Peter Moorfield, Robert Hinman, Dennis Flin, Thomas Farmer, — Stevens, John Bubbey, James Hutchinson, Andrew Kelley, Francis Fires, Daniel English, Robert Mitson, James Kent, — Robertson, James Rughley, of Boston: James Williams, David Williams, Chelsea; George Chockley, Bedford; Eleazer Thayer, — Potter, Providence; Wm. Russell, Vineyard; Abel Willis, Edward Burgess, Jethro Naughton, — Coffin, — Merchant, William Gardner, — Chapman, Martha's Vineyard; — Dunham, Falmouth; Barnabas Lathrop, Barnabas Downs, Jun'r, Barnstable."

The inhabitants of Plymouth provided for the comfort of the survivors in the best possible manner and ministered everything necessary to their restoration, with a tenderness and social sympathy characteristic of our best people.

On Monday the inhabitants passed over the ice to the wreck. Here was presented a scene unutterably awful and distressing. It is scarcely possible for the human mind to conceive of a more appalling spectacle. The ship was sunk ten feet in the sand; the waves had been for about thirty-six hours sweeping the main deck; the men had crowded to the quarter deck, and even here they were obliged to pile together dead bodies to make room for the living. Seventy dead bodies, frozen into all imaginable postures, were strewed over the deck, or attached to the shrouds and spars; about thirty exhibited signs of life, but were unconscious whether in life or death. The bodies remained in the posture in which they died; the features dreadfully distorted. Some were erect, some bending forward, some sitting with the head resting on the knees, and some with both arms extended, clinging to the spars or some parts of the vessel. The dead were piled on the floor of the Court House, and it is said that Dr. Robbins fainted when called to perform the religious services.

Among those who perished were Dr. Mann, of Attleborough, and Dr. Sears. Sixty persons were buried in one pit, on the south west side of the burial hill, at which is the above tablet.

In life's bright morn he met his early tomb
Tho' harsh the stroke and most severe the rod
Cease mourner cease—It was a stroke from God.*

1789 | Aged | fifty three | years.

*O ye whose cheek the tear of pity stains,
Draw near with pious reverence & attend
Here lie the loving Husband's dear remains
The tender Father & the generous Friend
The dauntless heart yet touch'd at human woe
A Friend to man to vice alone a foe.*

Capt. SIMEON SAMPSON was the son of Peleg and Mary (Ring) Sampson; born in Kingston, Mass., August, 1736. In early life he became a mariner, and was employed in the merchant service from Plymouth. In the year 1762, Mr. Sampson was taken prisoner by the French, in a vessel belonging to Goodwin & Warren, which was redeemed by the captain for a large sum of money, and Mr. Sampson was left as a hostage for the payment of the ransom. From this imprisonment he escaped by assuming the dress of a female, and was soon restored to his family in Plymouth.

At the commencement of the revolutionary war, when a marine force was deemed necessary to protect our commerce from the depredations of the British cruisers, he was honored by the Provincial Congress of Massachusetts with the appointment of the first naval captain in the service of the country. He immediately took command of the brig Independence, belonging to the colony, and which was built at Kingston, under his direction. In this vessel he was eminently successful, and in one cruise captured and sent in five prizes, among which was the Roebuck, Captain White, in the autumn of the year 1776. Immediately after this, he himself was captured by Capt. Dawson, of distinguished memory in these seas. Capt. Sampson did not surrender, until an engagement of a character as severe and bloody as perhaps is recorded in the annals of naval warfare. The skill and intrepidity manifested by him was applauded even by his enemies. Had he been sustained by all his men, he would undoubtedly have been the conqueror, rather than the vanquished. It is said in the gazette of that period, that he was driven to the awful necessity of running through the body of two or three of his men, who abandoned their guns in the most trying moment of the conflict. One of these victims was his third lieutenant. Soon after his return from captivity, which was at Fort Cumberland, near Halifax, he was appointed commander of the brig Hazard, a public vessel belonging to the state. In this vessel he likewise took several prizes, among which was the ship Live Oak. In 1779 he was selected to the command of the packet ship Mercury, built at Plymouth, by Mr. John Peck, for Congress. She was employed to carry despatches to our ministers in France. In this ship he returned from Nantz during the severe winter of 1780. Soon after which, he was promoted to the command of the Mars, a large ship, likewise belonging to the state, and in this vessel he was employed in the most responsible trust, in carrying despatches, and in one cruise carried out one of our ministers to Europe. The British flag ship Trial was captured by him while in the Warren. At the close of the war, he retired, like most of the faithful servants of our country, with a very scanty estate, and a numerous family dependent upon him for support.

In 1788, Capt. Sampson disposed of his mansion in Middle street, Plymouth, and purchased a farm in Plympton, where he terminated his earthly career by an apoplexy, June 22d, 1789, at the age of 53 years. He was buried upon his own farm, and afterwards his body was removed to the burying hill in Plymouth, where his grave is marked as above.

Few naval officers stood higher in public estimation, and few citizens were more respected for domestic virtues, hospitality, and generous friendship. He married Deborah, daughter of Seth Cushing of Hingham, Mass., who survived him, and died in Homer, N. Y., in 1830, at the age of 90 years. He had twelve children, seven of whom died young, and five of whom married.

his greateft | Delight) who died Nov^r 4 A. D. 1789: | in y^e 78
year of his Age.

*'Tis Heaven's irrevocable Decree,
That the great, the good, the pious fhall fall,
In the dark Grave undiftinguish'd to lie,
Till the laft Trumpet rends the azure fky!
When the Virtuous immortal will rife
To Glory and joys 'bove the ftarry fkyes!
The Vicious to pain, difhonour, contempt;
In realms below the fplendid Firmament!*

Rev. JOHN COTTON, son of Rev. Josiah and Hannah (Sturtevant) Cotton, born April 5, 1712; graduated at Harvard College 1730; ordained minister at Halifax, Mass., October 1736. In 1756, owing to a failing voice he requested a dismission which was granted. He succeeded his father as Register of Deeds, which office he held till his death, November 4, 1789. He was considered an able theologian, and much beloved as a pastor and preacher. He was the author of the valuable Account of Plymouth Church, appended to Rev. Chandler Robbins' ordination sermon in 1760, which was afterward republished by the Massachusetts Historical Society in volume 4 of their collections. He also published several occasional sermons, including among them seasonable warnings to the churches of New England, and tracts on "Infant Baptism." He was chosen delegate to the Convention for revising a Constitution for the Commonwealth in 1780, and was one of the committee for Plymouth county to draft the constitution. He left several children, among whom was Rev. Josiah Cotton, minister at Wareham, Mass., who became a magistrate, and clerk of the Court for Plymouth county, and died April 19, 1819, leaving a son who became a physician in Ohio, and a daughter who married Isaac Lothrop Hedge Esq. of Plymouth. His other sons were Rosseter, who for several years was Register of Deeds in Plymouth. Rev. Ward Cotton, of Boylston, Mass., was his son. Another son, John, was lost at sea in 1800.

*Ah! come heav'n's radiant Offspring hither throng
 Behold your prophet your Elijah fled
 Let sacred symphony attune each tongue
 To chant hosannas with the virtuous dead.*

Rev. CHANDLER ROBBINS, D. D. was the son of Rev. Philemon Robbins, of Branford, Conn., who was a native of Cambridge, Mass. Born August 24, 1738, graduated at Yale College in 1756, and was a distinguished classical scholar. He was ordained to the work of the ministry January 30, 1760, the same day on which Rev. Mr. Leonard was dismissed. He became early impressed with the truth and importance of the christian system, and qualified, by divine grace, for the gospel ministry. He commenced preaching this holy religion before he reached twenty years of age. In him was an example of religion, united with taste and accomplishments, of courteous manners, with an amiable cheerfulness of disposition. He always manifested a deep interest in, and a solicitude for the cause of religion in general, never forgetting the welfare and propriety of his church and society. In the discharge of his parochial duties he was ever faithful and kind; and the sick and afflicted could rely with confidence on his cordial sympathy and condolence. He had a peculiar suavity of manners, and christian humility combined with such a felicity of expression that rendered his religious sentiments acceptable to many who would not have received them from another source. His voice was melodious, and his taste for music, both vocal and instrumental was very refined. He preached chiefly without notes, having only a skeleton of his sermon before him. In prayer he was peculiarly devotional and fervent. Dr. Robbins lived during a remarkable period of the nation's history. In the revolutionary struggle he was a most zealous advocate for liberty and independence, and rendered essential service in his sphere of action. He was among the foremost of our patriotic clergymen, and subsequently, when our political hemisphere was darkened by party spirit, he pursued a consistent course in the support of order and good government. Mr. Robbins' wife was a niece of Rev. Thomas Prince of Boston. He had five sons and two daughters who lived to an old age.

A doctorate of divinity was conferred on him by Dartmouth College in 1792, and by the University of Edinburgh in 1793. He was buried in old Burial Hill ground, the Reverends Mr. Sawyer and Shaw officiating in the services in the First Church.

The following is a list of published works by Dr. Robbins:

Replies to Essays of Rev. John Cotton, on the practice of the half-way covenant.—Sermon on the death of Madam Watson, consort of George Watson, Esq. of Plymouth.—Sermon on the death of Mrs. Hovey, wife of James Hovey, Esq.—At the ordination of Rev. Lemuel Le Baron, at Rochester, 1772.—At the annual election, Boston, 1791.—Address commemorative of the French Revolution, 1793.—Sermon on the anniversary of the landing of the Fathers at Plymouth, December 22, 1793.—Century sermon at Kingston, April 2, 1794, at the request of its subject, Ebenezer Cobb.—Sermon before the Massachusetts Convention of Ministers, 1794.—Sermon at the Ordination of Rev. Eliphalet Gillet, at Hallowell, August 12, 1795.—Address before the Massachusetts Humane Society, June 14, 1796.—Sermon at the ordination of Rev. Ward Cotton, at Boylston, Mass., 1797.

G. W.

In Memory of | GEORGE WATSON Esq^r | who died the 3^d of December 1800 | in the 83^d Year of his Age.

*No folly wafted his paternal Store,
No guilt, no fordid art'rice made it more:
With honest fame, and sober plenty crown'd,
He liv'd and spread his cheering influence 'round.
Pure was his walk and peacefull was his end—
We blest'd his rev'rend length of Days,
And hail'd him in the public ways,
With veneration and with praise
Our Father and our Friend.*

It falls to the lot of but few people to leave such a reputation as that of Mr. Watson. By his uprightness of character and uniform dignity of manners, he preserved the respectability of his family to the grave, and we need no better testimonial of departed worth, than to know that his fellow citizens, assembled in town meeting, recommended the church bell to be tolled three hours on the day of his burial, a suspension of the usual business in the town, the closing of shops and stores, and a display of flags at half-mast on the shipping in the harbor. He was of an ancient and honorable family and died in a ripe old age. Rev. Dr. Kendall attended his funeral services and preached a sermon which was printed. Those who are familiar with North Street in Plymouth, the place of his residence, will call to mind the great pleasure Mr. Watson took in the cultivation of those fine linden trees at the front and rear of his house, and under the shadow of whose limbs, and in the cool refreshing shade of which he spent so many happy hours and days.

In person Col Watson was portly and well proportioned, his countenance noble and placid, and his urbanity and courtesy were proverbial. He left three children: Mary who married Elisha Hutchinson Esq., son of Governor Hutchinson of Massachusetts, and died in England before her father deceased. Sarah who married Martin Brimmer Esq., a merchant of Boston, and died in August, 1832. Elizabeth who married Hon. Thomas Russell, a merchant of Boston. After the decease of Mr. Russell, the widow married Sir Grenville Temple, and died in Rome about 1806, leaving three children.

Dr. THOMAS was the son of William and Anne (Patershall) (Breck) Thomas; born in Boston 1718. He was a descendant in the sixth generation from William Thomas, a merchant adventurer, who came to America, from Yarmouth, England, in the "Marye and Ann," in 1637, and settled in Marshfield, Mass. He was an eminent physician, of extensive practice in Plymouth for upwards of fifty years. He was a member of the medical staff in the hazardous and successful enterprise against Louisburg in 1745, and at Crown Point in 1758. He was an active man in the struggles with the mother country during the Revolution. Soon after the first blow was struck at Lexington, in 1775, he, with his four sons, joined the first organized revolutionary corps. Joshua became aide-de-camp to General Thomas in the expedition to Canada in 1776, and, at the conclusion of peace, Judge of Probate for Plymouth County; Joseph was a captain of an artillery company; and John was on the medical staff, and upon the termination of the struggle settled at Poughkeepsie, in the State of New York, in the practice of his profession, where he died in 1818, leaving a son and one daughter. The other sons settled in Plymouth. A daughter married and settled in Charlestown, N. H.

He married, 1st, Mary Papillon, of Boston; 2d, Mercy Bridgham, of Boston; 3d, Mary Howland.

*Here lies intomb'd within this house of clay
The mortal part of an engaging wife
Whose virtue shone amid the blaze of day
Whose kind affection ended with her life
Till Gabriel's trumpet's animating found
Bid soul and body meet and reunite
Here reft in silence in the vaulted ground
Then meet thy God with rapture & delight.*

941. Sacred | To the memory of | ISAAC LOTHROP Esq. | who departed this Life | the 25 of July 1808 | in the 75 year | of his age.

MR. LOTHROP was the son of Isaac and Priscilla (Thomas) (Watson) Lothrop, and was born in Plymouth, December 11, 1735, the eldest of five children, and, like his father, was a merchant, as well as Judge. He was appointed Judge of Probate for the county of Norfolk, which office he held till his death. The unbending uprightness of his conduct in his official capacity, the fidelity with which he discharged his duties, as well as his ability and gentlemanly bearing in all the works of life, will long be remembered with affectionate respect. He cherished with lively ardor a natural fondness for antiquity, and so exalted was his veneration for pious planters in New England, who first landed in Plymouth, that he delighted in tracing their every footstep, and the minutest circumstances of their history were treasured in his mind. He was one of the early members of the Pilgrim Society, and also one of the earliest members of the Humane Society.

"In his friendships he was steady, ardent and sincere; undisguised in his feelings, and removed from the least tincture of duplicity, his bosom was a sacred depository of confidential intercourse. If his prejudices were strong, they were invariably pointed at what he devoutly believed to be profligacy in principle, or dishonesty in practice. Such in fine was Mr. Lothrop's scrupulous integrity, such his thorough detestation of every species of iniquitous, or even temporizing procedure, that the inscription on the tombstone of his beloved father, would be an appropriate one for his own."—Thacher.

His father was a merchant, and he was educated in the same line, under his father's care and discipline. He soon established a reputation for industry and perseverance. Upon the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, he was soon found in the army, entering the service in the office of Major of Militia, and was attached to Colonel Gerrish's regiment, and was located at Boston and Cambridge, to guard the conventional troops taken under Burgoyne at Saratoga. He was a Major in the expedition to Rhode Island in 1778. Afterwards promoted to the office of Brigadier, and later to Major-General of Militia, which office he retained till his death. For many years he represented the town of Plymouth in the General Court, and was also a magistrate, having the qualities of an impartial judge. In all the duties to which he was called he was assiduous and capable, and was held in the highest esteem for probity, integrity and other virtues.

1210. In memory of | Hon WILLIAM DAVIS | Born July 15, 1758 | Died January 5, 1826.

HON. WILLIAM DAVIS was the son of Thomas and Mercy (Hedge) Davis, born in Plymouth; a well known and highly respected merchant, as well as a valued member of the community. He was ardently devoted to the interests of his native town, and having been early called to engage in its municipal affairs, he entered into its duties assiduously. He never sought political distinction, and whenever called into public service it was with reluctance. He represented the town of Plymouth in the General Court as Representative, and in 1812 and 1813 was a member of the Executive Council; one of the Selectmen of the town for about thirty years; President of the Plymouth Bank, and at the time of his death was Vice-President of the Pilgrim Society, in which he was deeply interested. He was of cheerful temper, of social habits, faithful and discreet in the discharge of his public trusts, and displayed an energy and activity which served to animate and cheer others with whom he was associated, and his death caused a deep, heartfelt sorrow.

MR. DAVIS married Rebecca, daughter of Nathaniel and Rebecca (Jackson) Morton, of Plymouth, 1781, and had William, 1783; Nathaniel Morton, 1785; Thomas, 1791; Elizabeth, 1803, married Alexander Bliss; and George Bancroft. Mr. Davis was grandfather of Hon. William T. Davis, the historian of Plymouth.

Than here has met an early blight,
No fairer eye has ever glowed
And beamed with intellectual Light.*

*Yet scarce we mourn his manly form
When once his nobler heart we view,
In love so kind in friendship warm,
In honor and devotion true.*

*O grave! thy triumph all shall be,
To guard awhile this precious dust,
The LORD of life, is LORD of thee
And thou shalt render back thy trust.*

Hon. ZABDIEL SAMPSON. | Faithful and assiduous in | public trust, amiable and | exemplary in private life; | the tears of friendship and | affection embalm his memory. | Born August 22.
1781 | Died July 19. 1828.

HON. ZABDIEL SAMPSON, son of George and Hannah (Cooper) Sampson, was born in Plympton, August 22, 1781. In early life his aim was to receive a collegiate education. To this end he devoted all his time and best energies. It was while at work at the anvil that he did his best studying, carrying on both branches in the blacksmith's shop at the same time. He graduated at Brown University in 1803, and was the first person who received a liberal education, at any college, from the town of Plympton. He studied Law and was admitted to the Bar, and commenced the practice of his profession in Fairhaven, Mass. He next removed to Plymouth, where he passed the remainder of his life. He was often called to public office, and enjoyed the confidence of his fellow-citizens, having been chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Plymouth several years. In 1818 he was elected Representative to Congress, for one term of two years. In 1820 he was Collector of the Port of Plymouth, which position he retained with honor to himself till his death. It was his privilege to enjoy the special friendship of Daniel Webster, and it was through his agency mainly that the Act of Congress was passed allowing bounties to fishermen, in the form of a drawback of the duty on salt, which has done so much to encourage the fishing interests in Massachusetts.

He married Ruth, daughter of Capt. Ebenezer and Judith Lobdell of Plympton, October 18, 1804, by whom he had ten children.

1265. Here lies buried | the Remains of | Doctor NATHANIEL LOTHROP | who died | October 19, 1828: | aged 92.

DR. LOTHROP was the son of Isaac, Esq., and Priscilla (Thomas) (Watson) Lothrop of Plympton, and in the fifth generation of his respected ancestor, John Lothrop. He graduated at Harvard University, at the head of the class of 1756. For many years he was the oldest person in the town, and survived all his old associates and companions, who were his joy and delight.

He left a legacy of five hundred dollars towards the completion of the Hall of the Pilgrim Society, in which he took a deep interest.

"He died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years, and was gathered to his fathers."

He married Ellen, daughter of Noah Hobart.

1273. To the | memory | of | SAMUEL DAVIS A.M. | who died | July 10. AD. 1829 | in the 65th year of his age.

*From life on earth our pensive friend retires,
His dust commingling with the pilgrim sires;
In thoughtful walks, their every path he trac'd,
Their toils, their tombs, his faithful page embrac'd,
Peaceful, and pure, and innocent as they,
With them to rise to everlasting day.*

SAMUEL DAVIS, Esq., was the son of Thomas and Mercy (Hedge) Davis of Plymouth, born Mar. 5, 1765. Mr. Davis was truly an antiquarian, and few men within our social circle possessed a greater fund of correct information relative to the character and circumstances of our primitive fathers. He contributed many articles of historical interest concerning the towns in Plymouth County, to the Massachusetts Historical Society's collection. He was, says the writer of an obituary notice, "the man to whom the inquisitive stranger was, by all of us, promptly referred. There was an accuracy and precision in the habit of his mind, that made all his minute and curious information perfectly to be relied on. He was what the world would call a man of leisure; but this leisure was no ignoble escape from thought; but was usually exactly adapted to its full gratification. He loved the characters of the pilgrims. He loved to trace out their original allotments, their first rude dwellings. He knew their sons and daughters, their intermarriages, their changes of abode, the living branches and the scions, that became new stocks in the most distant states. Of all these things he made copious memoranda. It is easy to infer the moral traits of an intellectual man, who, fond of history and biography, yet turned with disgust from the Cæsars, the Charleses, and Napoleons, and for thirty years persevered with delight in learning the minutest particulars of men like the pilgrims. The reader would be sure that he had, in the proper use of the word, simplicity of mind; that he was unostentatious and meek, and pure, and a lover of every age and clime. If he had peculiarities, they did not arise out of disordered affections, or from bitter ingredients in the composition of his mind; but were the natural growth of a life of celibacy, and seclusion of a mind less forcibly acted upon than most others, by the events and prevalent passions of the times he lived in."

The manner of his death was remarkable. Having walked out in the evening, he retired to his chamber about ten o'clock, his usual hour, and made an entry in his diary of the state of the weather. At breakfast time the next morning he was found a corpse, his arms folded on his breast without any indication that departing life had occasioned the least struggle, so tranquil was the end of his peaceful life.

1293. In | memory of | BEZA HAYWARD Esq. | who died | June 4th AD. 1830, | aged 78 years.

HON. BEZA HAYWARD was the son of Nathan and Susanna (Latham) Hayward; born in Bridgewater, Mass., January 20, 1752; graduated at Harvard College in 1772; studied divinity, but never was settled. Much of his early life was spent in preparing young men for college and teaching school for the higher branches of education.

He represented his native town in the General Court; afterward elected Senator for Plymouth County, and afterwards became a member of the Executive Council. Patriotism, public virtue and love of order were eminent traits in his character. He possessed a peculiar tact for mathematical calculations, and was very reliable, in the results of his labors, when for months he was engaged on committees of valuation in the Legislature.

In 1808 he was appointed Register of Probate for the county of Plymouth, which office he sustained till his death. In all the public positions to which he was called he was much respected for probity, strict integrity and impartial justice, and under bereavement the virtues of meekness, humility and pious resignation were graciously exemplified in his demeanor.

He married, 1st, Abigail, daughter of Col. Briggs and Mercy (Wadsworth) Alden, of Duxbury, Mass., November, 1784, by whom he had John Alden, 1788, and Peza. His wife died 1800. He then married Experience, daughter of Ichabod and Priscilla Shaw, and widow of James Russell, of Plymouth, and had Charles Latham, John Shaw, and Susanna, 1805.

*" We miss her in the hour of woe,
For then she tried to cheer,
And the soothing words of the pious child
Could dry the mourner's tear.
Even when she erred, we could not chide
For though the fault was small,
She always mourned so much and sued
For pardon from us all.
She was too pure for earthly love
Strength to our hearts was given
And we yielded her in her childhood's light,
To a brighter home in heaven.*

*That gentle one has passed away
No more to roam with us below:
And gone to realms of brighter day,
Where storms of woe shall cease to flow,
Where'er our eyes do chance to fall,
We find some relic left behind
That will her feeble form recall
And bring her peaceful voice to mind,
Then we'll not wish her back again,
But think she's happy now on high:
No more to strive with earthly pain,
No more to weep & groan & die,
And as we ne'er can meet below,
Our only wish & prayer shall be
That when far hence we're called to go
We may in heaven her spirit see.*

*And those dear eyes have shewn through tears,
But never looked unkind,
For shattered hopes and troubled years,
Still closer seemed to bind
Thy pure and trusting heart to mine,
Not for thyself did'st thou repine,
But all thy husband's grief was thine,
My beautiful, my wife.*

RUSSELL.

2180. On the top of this hill, not far from the monument of Governor Bradford, may be seen a granite boulder, brought from the pine hills of "Manomet," on which is neatly cut the following inscription:

THOMAS RUSSELL,

BORN,

SEPT. 26, 1825,

DIED,

FEB. 9, 1887.

HON. THOMAS RUSSELL, was the son of Thomas and Mary Ann (Goodwin) Russell, of Plymouth, born September 26, 1825. His early home was on Leyden Street, the first street of the Pilgrim Fathers, and here he received his earliest impressions of the trials and endurance of the founders of New England, and commenced early in life to honor the history of their lives in which he always took a lively interest. From early boyhood he was of a lively turn of mind, quick, bright and active, and a good scholar, receiving his education in the excellent schools which his native village afforded; he entered Harvard College at an early age, from whence he graduated in 1845, with high honors. He studied law at Harvard Law

School, and in the office of Hon. Jacob H. Loul at Plymouth, 1847, when he became a resident of Boston, and was a member of the Suffolk bar. Although a citizen of another municipality he never ceased to remember the town of his nativity, and was active in promoting the interests of her citizens, and the historical associations connected with the old mother town. He was chosen president of the Pilgrim Society in 1879, to succeed Hon. William T. Davis, and retained that position till his death. He was also instrumental in having inscribed upon the rock on Clark's Island the words, "On the Sabbath day wee rested," in remembrance of the first Sabbath spent on the shore by the Pilgrims.

Judge Russell did not practice his chosen profession long, for in 1853, at the early age of 27 years, Governor Boutwell appointed him Judge of the Municipal Court of Boston, a position which he filled with such general satisfaction that, in 1855, Governor Banks selected him as a proper person for Associate Justice of the Superior Court, where he remained until 1867. It was while he occupied the judicial chair of this court that he displayed those traits of firmness in his convictions and good judgment which were prominent characteristics belonging to him as a magistrate. Among the many good things the judge did while in the fearless discharge of his duties was the record he made in putting down garrotting in the streets of Boston. His sentence to the extent of the law was so promptly given that a reign of terror soon followed among all who were disposed to commit crimes of that nature, the influence of which has lasted to the present time. In 1866 he resigned his position on the bench to become collector of the port of Boston, which position he held until 1874, when he resigned, and was soon after appointed by President Grant Minister Resident at Caracas, Venezuela, where he remained till March, 1878. In 1879 he represented Boston in the Massachusetts Legislature, and became an influential and useful member of that body.

In June, 1879, he was appointed by Governor Talbot Railroad Commissioner, a position he filled, as chairman of the board, at the time of his death. Besides the foregoing, he occupied many other positions of honor and trust. In 1868 he was President of the Emigrant Savings Bank, and was an Overseer of Harvard College, a Trustee of the State Reform School and the Nautical School Ship, and during the war was a Draft Commissioner, and was intensely loyal to the Union, and always looked after the interests of the soldier, prompt and patriotic in all his acts.

Judge Russell was of a kindly disposition, genial temperament, and had many social traits that won for him hosts of friends; of much original wit and humor, a wonderful conversationalist, full of varied information acquired by extensive reading.

His humanity was large, and his love of liberty was such that it was not strange that we find him identified with such men as Garrison, Phillips, Andrews, and others in the Anti-Slavery cause, and a leader in the Free Soilers' ranks. Upon the occasion of the visit of General Grant to Plymouth, it was Judge Russell's privilege, as President of the Pilgrim Society, to receive the General, and place in his hand the sword of Captain Myles Standish.

He saw the bright side of life, and enjoyed it. He was, indeed, eminent as specialist, jurist, statesman, and orator. Among his best efforts as a public orator was the occasion of the obsequies of General Grant, August 8, 1885, by Post 76, G. A. R., "which was an eloquent, appropriate and fitting eulogy upon the great Chieflain." His last public address was upon the occasion of the Anniversary of the Pilgrim Society at a dinner at which Hon. James Russell Lowell was present, December 21, 1885.

He was a member of Mt. Lebanon Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Boston, and had spoken at a great many assemblies, and was well known in political, judicial and social circles of Boston, as well as throughout the State. His death took place February 9, 1887, at his home, 20 Hancock Street, in Boston, and in accordance with his oft repeated desire to be buried on Burial Hill, his request was granted. B. K.

A DESCRIPTIVE LIST

OF TOMBS, MONUMENTS, ENCLOSED LOTS, INSCRIPTIONS OF
SPECIAL INTEREST, ETC.

ENTRANCE TO BURIAL HILL.

As we ascend by the path leading from town square, on the right hand, are several granite block front tombs with iron doors, over which are marble caps, with the following names upon them. The first one belongs to the town. The others in order are FINNEY, BARNES and STEPHENS. In the centre of the tombs is a marble tablet having "A. D. 1833" upon the same.

On the left hand, as we pass up the hill in the rear of the First Church, are several other tombs, upon which are the names of HEDGE, DAVIS, SPOONER and WARREN; further on is the tomb of EPHRAIM PATY—1856.

On the right hand, or north side of the concrete path, is the monument of FREDERIC HOLMES, 1863. (See No. 1896. page 248.)

On the easterly brow of the hill, a short distance away on the right, is an obelisk in marble, nine feet in height, on the top of which is a Bible; the whole enclosed with an iron fence and belonging to the family of DEA. JOSIAH ROBBINS. (See No. 915, page 108, and No. 1825, page 199.)

Next to the last named is a lot enclosed by a low wood fence, and having marble and slate stones, belonging to the family of BRIDGHAM RUSSELL. (See No. 1516, page 199.)

ABRAHAM JACKSON'S lot is enclosed by an iron fence, and contains marble stones, a little to the north of the ROBBINS monument. (See No. 1826, page 240.)

Almost to the top of the ascent is a marble shaft eight feet high, on which is inscribed BATTLES, enclosed by a granite border. (See No. 1777, page 233.)

FAUNCE GRAVESTONE.

We next notice an old slate stone at the grave of ELDER THOMAS FAUNCE, quite near the path, worthy of attention. (See No. 1777, page 233.)

At the junction of the main path at the top of the hill is a lot fenced with wood, belonging to the COWAN family. (See No. 1891, page 247, and No. 1945, page 254.)

A short distance further on is a neat marble monument about 4 feet high, with HOWLAND on its base. (See No. 1982, page 259.)

Following the main path in a northerly direction, on the right we come to the grave of JUDGE THOMAS RUSSELL, which is covered by a huge boulder brought from the "Pine Hills of Manomet." (See No. 2180, page 290.)

Adjoining to the last named is the tomb of the Russell family, having a horizontal marble slab supported by four stone columns, on which are the following inscriptions: JOHN, CHARLES, NANCY and MARY RUSSELL. (See No. 757, page 86.)

RUSSELL TOMB.

A few feet distant from the Judge Russell monument to the eastward may be seen the white marble obelisk erected several years since to commemorate the memory of GOVERNOR WILLIAM BRADFORD, the second Governor of Plymouth Colony. This shaft is about eight feet in height, and is situated in a most prominent position on the hill, commanding a full view of the town below, the harbor and the bay, and has become a central attraction for many thousands of visitors to the resting place of the pilgrims.

Here multitudes have gathered under the shadows of the beautiful elm and larch trees, and lingered to contemplate in their minds the wintry scenes of 1620. This is the central point of interest on the hill. (See No. 1, page 1.)

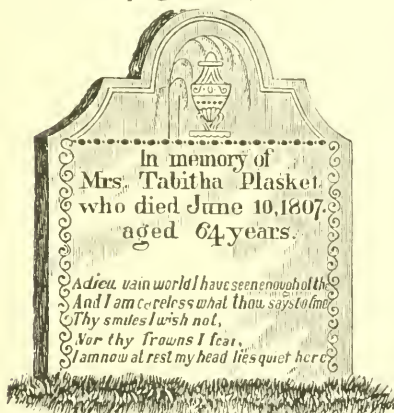

From this last monument, following the path northerly on the right, we read the names of BRADFORD, BARNES, BARTLETT, COOPER, DOTEN, HOLMES, SAMPSON, SHURTLEFF and SYLVESTER, while those on the left are BRADFORD, COBB, JACKSON, MORTON, RICKARD, TRIBBLE and WETHERELL. The last named is enclosed by an iron fence and is near to the main path.

At the junction of the main path with the north path leading to the westerly entrance of the ground may be seen a solid granite monument about 5 feet high, on the front of which is a panel in bronze commemorating the memory of one of Plymouth's late well-known physicians, DR. ZACHEUS BARTLETT. (See No. 1415, page 185.)

In the MORTON enclosure, on the north-easterly slope of the hill is a marble monument 4 feet high, having on the same, neatly cut, a chain in a circle, with "Parted Below, United Above." (See No. 1833, page 240.)

At the northerly end of the main path is a double base granite monument, having an octagon shaft about ten feet in height, on which are the names of CHURCHILL and CURRIER. (See No. 2119, page 273.)

In a wooden fence enclosure in the northeast section, on a polished granite block, is the name of ELLIS D. BARNES. (See No. 2194, page 283.)

At the extreme north part of the hill may be found the following names: BARNES, BARTLETT, BRADFORD, BREWSTER, BROWN, CHURCHILL, CLARK, COOPER, COLLINGWOOD, CURRIER, GLEASON, GOODWIN, GRIFFIN, HALL, HUESTON, HOLMES, NELSON, PERRY, RAYMOND, RICHMOND, RIPLEY, ROBERTS, SHAW, STEPHENS, TRIBBLE, WHITTEN and WOOD.

Passing from the monument of Dr. Bartlett in a south-westerly direction, a short distance on the right hand, are two slate stones marking the graves of JOSEPH and TABITHA PLASKET, at which visitors would do well to pause, and read the quaint in-

Adjoining the last-mentioned graves is a polished granite monument, 5 feet high, enclosed by a substantial iron railing and stone corners. This lot belongs to the well-known family of JOHN T. HALL, late a merchant of Plymouth. (See No. 2173, page 279.)

A short distance north of the HALL lot is a large slate stone, 5x2½ feet, to the memory of CAPT. JOSEPH CHURCHILL, who was lost at sea in 1836. This is a finely executed representation of a brig at sea in a storm in bass-relief.

Erected | in memory of | JOSEPH
CHURCHILL | who sailed from Boston

| MARCIA GOODWIN | died May 2,
1839 | aged 22 years. (See No. 1434, page 188.)

CHURCHILL GRAVESTONE.

To the west a few feet is a granite block, on which rests a thick marble tablet 4½ feet high, on the top of which is "WITTEN."

On the north summit of the hill east of the main path is a fine specimen of slate-stone cutting on the tablet, 30x48, of RICHARD FISHER, consisting of three willows, the centre spreading two others, representing three arms. (See No. 1227, page 154.)

In the northeast section of the hill, on the easterly slope, is a group of names of the COLLINGWOOD family, a name well known for their faithful service in the cause of their country in the rebellion of 1861. There are three polished granite blocks in the lot. (See No. 219, page 283, also memorial list, page 290.)

Near to this last lot is the BARNES enclosure, with a wood fence. In it is a granite block with "WILL" upon the same.

The PERRY lot, with iron rail and granite posts, is near to the Barnes lot above named.

The grave of CAPT. JOSEPH BARTLETT is also enclosed like the last.

The BROWN family has some fine slate stones at the north end of the main path, with engravings of a sarcophagus on the same.

The RIPLEY family grave is at the junction of the main path with the path leading to the west. Here are some interesting carvings on large slate stones.

Adjoining the last named are the graves of ICHABOD SHAW'S family.

GOODWIN TOMB.

The lot of FRANKLIN B. HOLMES, south of the GOODWIN tomb, is enclosed by a wooden fence.

To the east of the main path is the white granite monument of the ROBBINS family, 12 feet high, enclosed by a rustic iron fence, on the gateway of which is "L. T. ROBBINS, 1859."

Southeast of the last lot, on the easterly brow of the hill, is an enclosure with granite curbings and corners, belonging to one of the BARTLETT family.

To the southeast of the Robbins monument is a lot enclosed by a rustic iron fence, represented by another of the BARTLETT family.

On the east of the main path is the marble tablet of REV. AURIN BUGBEE. (See No. 1831, page 240.)

On the left hand side of the path leading from the main path to Russell street is one of the oldest stones on the hill. A wooden sign has been erected beside the same, as the old slate is much defaced, and almost illegible.

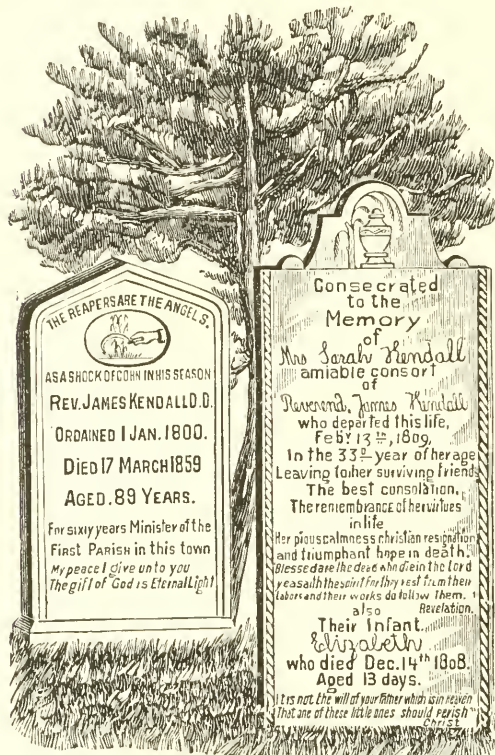

Nearly opposite the head of the path leading from the First

Near the above mentioned lot on the east, and near the path leading to School street, is the GOODWIN TOMB, a large thick marble slab supported by six square freestone columns. See No. 1041, page 126, No. 2168, JUDSON TOMB.

Church, in the rear of the site of the "watch house," is the JUDSON TOMB, enclosed by a wooden fence, and containing several inscriptions on the marble top. (See No. 1240, page 156.)

KENDALL GRAVES.

South of the site of the watch house, and under the limbs of a larch tree, is the white marble tablet to the memory of REV. JAMES KENDALL, D. D., on which is a fine sculptural design of a Reaper with a sickle in hand cutting corn. (See No. 1828, page 240.)

Also, near by is the memorial to SARAH, wife of REV. DR. KENDALL. (See No. 951, page 114.)

Passing along the path in a southerly direction leading towards the CUSHMAN monument on either side, we notice the names of BARTLETT, BARNES, DAVIS and PIERCE, the last lot being enclosed by an iron fence.

Directly in the rear of the latter, to the east, is the "Warren" Lot, with a lattice work iron fence. In this enclosure may be seen the marble tablet of GEN. JAMES WARREN and MERCY, his wife, 1808-1814. (See biographical sketches of his life on another page.)

Directly east of the Cushman slate stone, and between the monument and First Church, is the site of the ancient fort of 1620-1, which was about 20x20 feet. A thick oval marble block on a pedestal marks the location.

In this vicinity are the following familiar names: BARNES, DAVIS, HOLMES, GODDARD, SIMMONS and TALBOT. These lots are enclosed by iron fences. (See No. 1496, page 196.)

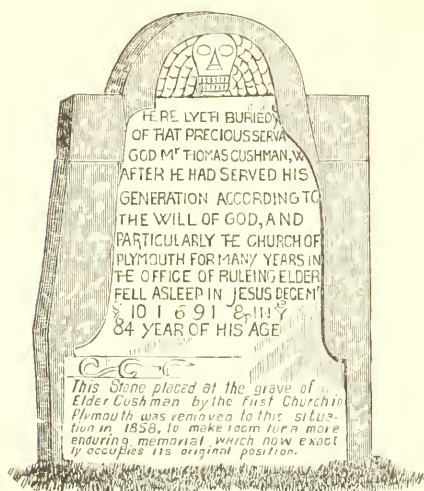

CUSHMAN MONUMENT,
IN BURYING HILL CEMETERY, PLYMOUTH, MASS.

ERECTED A. D. 1858.

On the southerly end of the main path, on the right hand, may be seen the tall and imposing monument erected to the memory of ROBERT CUSHMAN by his numerous descendants. It is enclosed by an iron fence, and is situated near by the original slate stone of ELDER THOMAS CUSHMAN, which has become much dilapidated by age. (See No 7, pages 5 and 6.)

South of the Davie lot is the granite curbed lot and enclosure of CAPT. SOLOMON DAVIE, with marble obelisk.

Near by is the BENJAMIN GODDARD and IVORY HARLOW lot

CUSHMAN SLATE STONE.

Another CHURCHILL lot is on the southerly brow, and near the south path.

NATHANIEL CARVER'S lot contains a white monument in the rear of the church ground. (See No. 1031, page 125, and No. 1579, page 207.)

Near the last named is a polished granite monument to the memory of CAPT. HARVEY WESTON, 1876, and others.

Also another polished granite monument near by, on which is CAPT. GEO. ALLEN, 1888. (See No. 2191, page 282.)

A short distance northwest of the CUSHMAN monument is an old dark slate stone, about 18 inches high, to the memory of DR. FRANCIS LE BARON, whose name has been immortalized by Mrs. Jane G. Austin, in her work entitled "A Nameless Nobleman," a volume well worth perusing, especially for any one interested in the history of Plymouth. (See No. 13, page 8.)

Opposite to the latter is a large, thick stone, 4 feet square and 3 inches thick, of gray slate, on which is inscribed DR. LAZARUS LE BARON, son of the former doctor. (See No. 419, page 44.)

on the southerly brow of the hill, and enclosed with a granite curb and corners.

Also the STURTEVANTS' graves near the GEN. WARREN lot.

Directly west of the CUSHMAN monument is the heavy iron fence enclosure of HENRY ERLAND. (See No. 1644, page 229.)

To the right of this marble monument is the obelisk of JAMES BURNS, about 5 feet high. (See No. 2048, page 226.)

North of the CUSHMAN monument is the brick tomb of ICHABOD HARLOW, hav-

LE BARON GRAVE-STONE.

LINES ON GRAVE-STONE.

My flesh shall slumber in the ground
Till the last trumpet's joyful sound;
Then burst the chains with sweet surprise,
And in my Saviour's image rise.

Dr. Lazarus LeBaron was born in Plymouth Dec. 26, 1698; studied medicine and became a physician, and enjoyed a lucrative practice in his profession, and died in 1773, aged 75 years. He had two sons, Joseph and Lazarus, who became physicians; and Lemuel, a clergyman, settled in Mattapoiset, Mass., in 1772.

WILLIAM DREW's lot is on the top of the hill south of and near to the John Howland grave, and has two marble stones. (See No. 1283, page 164, and No. 1510, page 198.)

In the background of the annexed engraving, to the south of the main path leading to Russell street, may be seen a large granite tablet about $4\frac{1}{2}$ feet by $2\frac{1}{2}$ feet and 6 inches thick, which marks the resting place of REV. JAMES H. BUGBEE, the first settled pastor of the Universalist Church in Plymouth. He was ordained Dec. 22, 1826, and remained until his death, which took place May 10, 1834. (See No. 1379, page 181.)

The following lines are inserted as being exceedingly appropriate to a work of this kind: —

HOWLAND GRAVE-STONE.

One of the oldest graves in the old Pilgrim burying ground at Plymouth is that of John Howland. The first stone erected to the memory of this old settler has crumbled, and another erected on the spot is in an advanced stage of decay. From this latter stone, the following taken from the Plymouth records is quoted: "He was the last that was left of those that came over in the Mayflower that lived in Plymouth."

The slab erected long ago
Has yielded to destroying rust;
And with the lord who sleeps below,
Has joined old Plymouth's silent dust.
Yet still another marks the place
To keep remembrance fresh and green,
And link the pride of former days
With freedom's creatures yet unseen.

John Howland! Let that name survive
When millions sleep in nameless graves;
Aye, honest fame shall keep alive
This strongest of the Pilgrim braves.
Though mighty statesmen sigh for fame,
Though soldiers fight and poets muse,
This simple-minded father's name
Shall all their highest hopes confuse.

He sought for neither wealth nor ease —
He only sought for freedom's air;
For this he braved the wintry seas
And Western forests, bleak and bare.
He suffered hunger's gnawing breath,
He dared the Red Man's wily laws,
He faced a most inglorious death,
And all to die in freedom's cause.

Inglorious? So thought the slave
Who toiled in Europe's sunny clime,
While every church did wildly rave
And stamp this hardy man with crime.
But who were they? Where do they sleep?
Where are their monuments? their names?
Do grateful States their memory keep
And shield it from oblivion's flames?

No! Death has levelled them so low
Remembrance never can awake;
Their names shall not with lustre glow,
They sleep unknown for freedom's sake.
But untold millions pass along
Who stop to read John Howland's name.
And in our history and song
A grateful people guard his fame.

—H. M. in New Bedford Standard.

LITTLE GRAVE-STONE.

To the left of the grave of Rev. Mr. Bugbee is the head-stone of the first minister who died in Plymouth, REV. EPHRAIM LITTLE. He was a native of Marshfield, Mass., and was pastor of the First Plymouth Church for twenty-four years. (See No. 59, page 12.)

Adjoining the grave of the last-mentioned is a low head-stone containing a simple inscription of the death and age of one who was a prominent figure in Plymouth in its early history, and was Secretary of the Colony after the death of Nathaniel Morton, and also a counsellor-at-law. Besides the duties of preserving the doings of the Colony, he was Clerk of Courts, Register of Deeds, as well as of Probate.

He was for a short time owner of what is known as "Clark's Island," under a grant from the King during the obnoxious reign of Sir E. Andros. It passed out of his hands to the town, and was afterwards sold to private parties, and has been held in the Watson family to this day.

CLARK GRAVE-STONE.

NATHANIEL CLARK, the engraving of whose head-stone accompanies this article, was the son of Thomas and Susanna (Ring) Clark, and is buried near his father's monument mentioned below. He married Dorothy, widow of Edward Gray, and left no children. (See No. 37, page 10.)

CLARK MONUMENT.

Alongside the last mentioned is the old slate-stone at the grave of THOMAS CLARK, which has been so often pointed out to the stranger as the grave of the mate of the Mayflower. This is not true to history, as may be seen on page 113 of the History of Plymouth County, published in 1884; also in Davis' Ancient Landmarks, page 145; and we also have the statement on a bronze tablet attached to a huge boulder brought from "Manomet Hills," which has recently been erected adjoining to the ancient stone, by Miss Kate Lincoln Clark, of Chicago, Ill., by which it appears that Thomas Clark came over in the Ann, three years later than the Mayflower. (See No. 6, p. 4.)

HERE LIES BURIED YE BODY OF
MR. THOMAS CLARKE.

Aged 98.

DEPARTED THIS LIFE MARCH 24, 1697.

Thomas Clarke came to Plymouth from England in the ship Anne, 1623. He married Susan Ring of Plymouth, 1634. Their Children were Andrew, James, William, Susanna, Nathaniel, and John, from whom descended a numerous posterity. He married his second wife Mrs Alice Hallett Nichols of Boston and also in Harwich of which town he was one of the original proprietors. He died in Plymouth, having lived in the reigns of Six British Sovereigns and the Commonwealth.

THIS STONE IS ERECTED TO HIS MEMORY
BY HIS DESCENDANTS
A. D. 1891.

In the rear of the Bugbee lot, to the west, is a low wooden fence, enclosing some pink marble tablets of the NICHOLAS and ABBOT DREW families. (See No. 152, page 20, and 2140, page 276.)

West of the Drew ground is a JACKSON lot enclosed with an iron fence, pointed palings.

The lot of SOLOMON RICHMOND joins the Drew lot, in the western part of the hill, and has a wooden rail fence. (See No. 1530, page 201.)

Another lot in the west part of the hill is the lot of JOHN T. and WOODWORTH JACKSON, enclosed with an iron fence. (See No. 1138, page 140, and No. 1180, page 146.)

Near the latter, to the east, is a lot enclosed by a wood fence, the family lot of JACOB JACKSON. In this lot is a large marble slab supported on columns, and several names on the same. (See No. 1807, page 237, and No. 1574, page 207.)

In the westerly portion of the hill and directly south of the last named Jackson lot is the monument erected to mark the spot where sixty of the crew of Brig GENERAL ARNOLD were buried, known as the "MAGEE MONUMENT," after the name of the captain of the lost brig. It is a marble shaft on a granite base enclosed within a rail, and granite posts. (See No. 472, page 50.)

MAGEE MONUMENT.

Here follow the inscriptions that are on the four sides of the monument, viz.:—

NORTH, OR FRONT, SIDE.—In memory of seventy-two seamen, who perished in Plymouth harbor on the 26 and 27 days of December, 1778, on board the private armed brig GEN. ARNOLD, of twenty guns, numbering in officers and crew one hundred and six persons in all, JAMES MAGEE, of Boston, Commander, sixty of whom were buried on this spot, and twelve in other parts of the hill.

EAST SIDE.—This monument marks the resting place of sixty of the seventy two mariners who perished in their strife with the storm, and is erected by STEPHEN GALE, of Portland, Maine, a stranger to them, as a just memorial of their suffering and death.

SOUTH SIDE.—

“Oh! falsely flattering were yon billows smooth,
When forth, elated, sailed in evil hour
That vessel, whose disastrous fate, when told,
Filled every breast with sorrow and each eye with piteous tears.”

WEST SIDE.—CAPT. JAMES MAGEE, died in Roxbury, February 4th, 1801, aged 51 years.

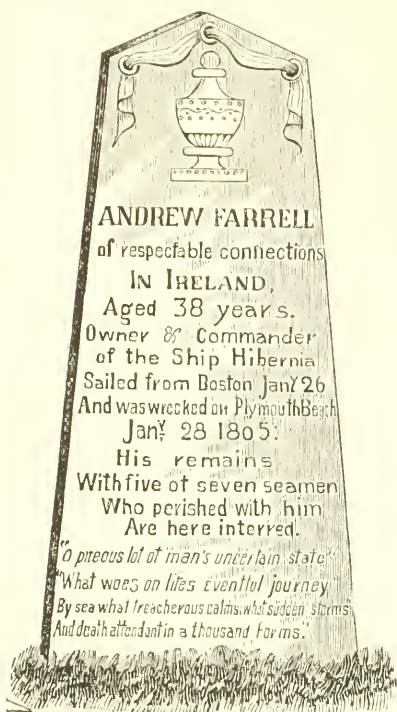

In the south-west portion of the hill, and south of the Magee lot, is a tall gothic marble tablet of ALLEN C. SPOONER. (See No. 1739, page 228.)

Next to the last named, south-west, is the DAVID WARREN lot, with iron posts at the corners connected by chains. (See No. 804, page 92.)

In the central portion of the west end of the hill is a peculiar shaped slate-stone erected to mark the spot where ANDREW FARRELL, captain and owner of the ship "Hibernia," with five other seamen, were buried. They were wrecked on Plymouth Beach, Jan. 28, 1805. (See No. 884, page 104.)

In the west section of the hill are the family lots and graves of many of the well-known citizens of the town, among whom are the BRADFORD, CORNISH, COTTON, DAVIS, DREW, HARLOW, JACKSON, PATY, WASHBURN and WESTON names. (For the inscriptions on the stones and monuments see the index of names.)

Among the earliest gravestones on the hill is that of EDWARD GRAY, 1681, which has been supposed to be the oldest; but the late Dr. Nathaniel Lothrop is said to have information from an aged relative by which it appears that the stone of JOSEPH BARTLETT, who died in 1703, was the earliest placed there, and that Mr. Gray's was erected at a later date. The accompanying engraving is a correct copy of the grave-stone of Mr. Bartlett, situated on the top of the hill, a short distance west of the head of the main path as one ascends from the church, and near to the grave of Rev. Dr. Kendall. (See No. 10, page 7.)

BARTLETT GRAVE-STONE.

The visitor to the hill, on arriving at the summit, near the head of the path, and on the main avenue, will notice an oval marble block on a pedestal, marking the site of the old WATCH HOUSE. At the corners of the lot are short granite posts indicating the bounds of the same. (See ante pages XI and XII.)

The two following engravings represent two of the DAVIS gravestones, and are situated at the west end of the hill. This family have long been among the prominent names in the town of Plymouth:—

THE OLD POWDER HOUSE.

The accompanying engraving of the OLD POWDER HOUSE will be recognized by many of the older residents and others. It was erected in 1770, of brick, and stood on the north-east part of the hill. A little mound is said to have been built by the scholars of Mrs. Cotton at the time of Queen Anne's war, a short distance from the same in a south-east direction.

We present to our readers on the two following pages some of the grave-stones of the Bradford family. The oldest is that of JOSEPH BRADFORD, the youngest son of Governor William and Alice (Southworth) Bradford, born in 1630, and was a resident of what was well known as "Flat House Dock," about one-half a mile from the mouth of Jones River, and known as Kingston. He lies buried quite near his father, on the top of the hill, in immediate proximity to others of the same name. The name of Bradford has always been an honored one, and the various branches are widely scattered throughout this country. The principal seat of the family was in Plymouth in colonial days, and also at Plympton, Kingston and Duxbury. In later days they are found in Maine, Rhode Island and all other sections of the United States.

While the descendants of Gov. Bradford have been numerous, they have also occupied prominent public positions of honor and trust. They have been among our Governors, Members of Congress, Officers in the Revolutionary Army, as well as in the ranks of the Militia. Hon. Alden Bradford, the late Secretary of Massachusetts, and author, was a descendant from Duxbury, and Governor William Bradford, of Bristol, R. I., was a descendant from Plympton, formerly the west precinct of Plymouth. He married, April, 1751, Mary LeBaron, daughter of Dr. Lazarus and Lydia (Bartlett) LeBaron, of Plymouth.

The LeBaron Bradfords mentioned on the grave-stone accompanying this article were respectively son and grandson of Gov. William Bradford, of Bristol, and lie buried at the west section of the hill, near to the Davis graves.

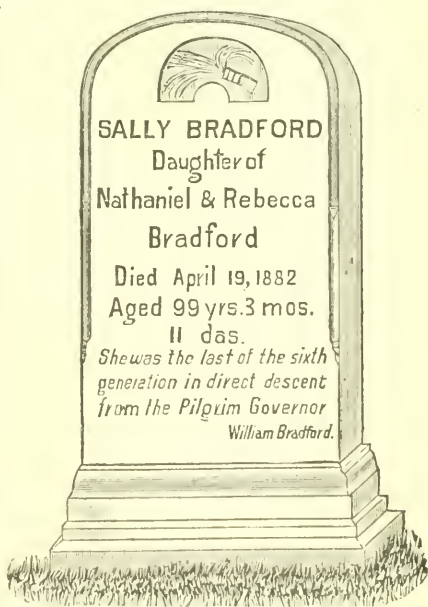

NATHANIEL BRADFORD GRAVE-STONE.

The writer of these articles has always taken a great interest in the earliest families of the Colony of Plymouth, and for the purposes of information paid a visit to the English home of the Pilgrim Fathers in June, 1888, visiting the little church in Austerfield in which was the oaken chest containing the Baptismal register of WILLIAM BRADFORD, afterwards the Governor of Plymouth, and the ancestor of the Bradford family of Massachusetts. The little graveyard adjoining the stone church was also visited, to learn how many burials of the name might be found. Austerfield, on the Great Northern road, is a village in Yorkshire about two and one-half miles north of Scrooby, following the course of the River Idle, and from the old Manor House, where Brewster and other of the Pilgrims held their meetings.

The manor house of their day has long since disappeared. There is but little now remaining except traces of the old moat which once surrounded the same. Carved oaken timbers are now doing duty in one of the farm barns of the occupant of the grounds. The writer has some pieces of the same, presented to him as a reminder of his visit to Scrooby. There is an old Mulberry tree on the premises, however, said to have been planted during the occupancy of William Brewster, afterwards known as "Elder" Brewster in the new colony of Plymouth, America. It has been well settled that this place was where the early meetings of the Pilgrims were held, and it is appropriate that mention should be made of the English homes, as well as their last resting place here.

BIOGRAPHICAL.

THE OLD SEXTON.

CLEMENT BATES.

Those who have made an annual pilgrimage to Plymouth of late years have missed the genial and kind-hearted "OLD SEXTON." He no longer can be seen at the entrance of the church door, tolling the bell, nor travelling among the graves of those he long since laid away. His name was Clement Bates, a native of Hanover, Mass., born Oct. 4, 1792. He was the son of Clement and Rebecca (Stetson) Bates, and died July 13, 1885, at the age of nearly 93 years. Mr. Bates came to Plymouth in 1809, and previous to 1831 worked at the trade of caulker and graver. In that year he was chosen sexton of the First Parish and of the town, to which which position he was annually chosen to the year 1883, when he resigned. His duties have been to ring the church bells daily, and to bury the dead. And it is said he has buried 3250 persons, equal to about one-half the present population of the town. He rang the bell four times a day, besides those for church services on the Sabbath, for funerals and for fire alarms for fifty-two years, without a failure and only two mistakes. His mental and physical faculties he retained to an unusual degree till his death, and his memory of occurrences was clear and reliable. In early life he was quite an athlete, of jovial disposition and fond of jokes, besides being a good story teller, of cheerful temperament, loved and respected by all. We can almost see him, with bowed form and leaning on his cane, making his way around the town at a rapid pace.

GEN. JAMES WARREN was the son of James and Penelope (Winslow) Warren, born in Plymouth, Mass., 1726. He descended from Richard Warren, one of the earliest settlers of Plymouth; graduated at Harvard College in 1745, and became a merchant. In 1757 he succeeded his father as high sheriff, which office he retained till the Revolution. In 1766 he was a member of the General Court from Plymouth. He is said to have been the originator of the plan for establishing "committees of correspondence" in the various towns and cities. In 1775 he became a member of the Provincial Congress, and upon the death of Gen. Joseph Warren he was appointed President of that body. While the army was at Cambridge he was chosen Paymaster General. In 1776 he was appointed Major General of the Massachusetts Militia. In 1780 he was elected Lieutenant-Governor under Hancock, but declined to serve. He was for several years Speaker of the House of Representatives. He was appointed to the office of Judge of the Supreme Court, which he declined. He served as Commissioner of the Navy Board for some time. At the close of the war he retired from public life, in order that he might enjoy the ease of domestic life, and became interested in agricultural pursuits. He was soon called from private life to serve in the councils of the government. For some years he resided at the Gov. Hutchinson seat at Milton, but returned to his native town, where he resided till his decease, Nov. 28, 1808. His residence was at the corner of Main and North streets, in the house now standing. He married Mercy, the daughter of Hon. James and Mary (Allyne) Otis, of Barnstable, Mass. She was a sister of the patriot and orator. Mrs. Warren was the author of a "History of the War." She died Oct. 19, 1814, at the age of 86 years. James, son of the above, was for several years postmaster of Plymouth, and was with Paul Jones in the "Bon Homme-Richard," and lost a limb in one of the battles. He was buried in the grave with his father; and Henry was collector of the port of Plymouth, and died July 6, 1828, aged sixty-four years.

GEN. JAMES WARREN, | died November 28, 1808; | aged 82,
| MERCY WARREN | his wife | daughter of James Otis | of
Barnstable | died October 19, 1814; | aged 86.

REV. DR. JAMES KENDALL was the youngest son of Major James and Elizabeth (Mason) Kendall; born in Sterling, Mass., Nov. 3, 1769. After the usual preparation for college, he entered Harvard College in 1792, and graduated with high honor in 1796. On leaving college he passed two years at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., as assistant teacher, at the same time pursuing his theological studies under the direction of Rev. Dr. Tappan, then Professor of Divinity at Harvard College, and with Rev. Jonathan French. He received approbation to preach from the Andover Association in 1795. In that year he was chosen tutor of Greek in the college, and removed to Cambridge, continuing his theological studies at the same time. He first preached at Plymouth as a candidate in October, 1799, and was ordained as pastor of the First Church of Plymouth January 1, 1800, Rev. Jonathan French of Andover preaching the installation sermon. Here he continued his labors of love for thirty-eight years alone, till 1838, when Rev. George W. Briggs, a graduate of Brown University, was settled as colleague pastor, and remained as such till 1852, he continuing to preach in his own pulpit and others in the neighboring towns. He died March 17, 1859, in the ninetieth year of his age. His funeral sermon was preached by his former colleague, Rev. Dr. Briggs, then of Salem, Mass. Dr. Kendall married Sarah, daughter of Dea Daniel Poor, of Andover, Mass., by whom he had six children. (See No. 1828, page 240.)

DR. JAMES THACHER, the late eminent surgeon and physician of Plymouth, was the son of John and Content (Norton) Thacher, and was born in Barnstable, Mass., in 1754. At an early date he began to devote his attention to medicine, and studied the profession with Dr. Abner Hersey, a very celebrated physician of Barnstable. Upon arriving at the age of 21 years Dr. Thacher was appointed by the Provincial Congress a surgeon in the Revolutionary army, and in July, 1775, commenced the active duties incident to hospital life, at Cambridge. He was afterwards at Albany and West Point, N. Y., and was present at the execution of Benedict Arnold for treason. He was also present at the surrender of Lord Cornwallis, Oct. 19, 1780. In 1824 he published a journal of events occurring while he was in the army. At the termination of the war he settled in Plymouth as surgeon and physician, where he enjoyed the entire confidence of his fellow-citizens, and was eminently successful in his practice. He devoted a great deal of time to antiquarian researches, and was a member of several literary societies. He was an active member of the Pilgrim

Society, of Plymouth, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the Massachusetts Medical Society, and others. He received the degree of M. D. from Harvard College in 1810. He was one of the most voluminous and elaborate writers in the medical ranks of New England. In 1828 he published two volumes of Medical Biography, and in 1832 a History of Plymouth, a highly interesting and reliable volume. A fellow-townsmen, in writing of Dr. Thacher's private character, says: "As a citizen he was public spirited, a lover of order and a warm supporter of the civil and religious institutions under which he lived, and in all the relations of life he was guided by a spirit of benevolence, kindness, and disinterestedness, which gained him the attachment and regard of many friends."

Dr. Thacher married Susanna, daughter of Nathan and Susanna (Latham) Hayward of Bridgewater, Mass., 1785, and had six children.

WILLIAM SHAW RUSSELL was the son of James and Experience (Shaw) Russell, and direct descendant of John Russell of Glasgow. He was born in Plymouth, January 11, 1792, where he spent his early days, with the exception of a short time while he resided in Bridgewater. Upon arriving to manhood he engaged in active business, and married MARY WINSLOW, 1798, daughter of Dr. Nathan and Joanna (Winslow) Hayward. In 1826 he became a resident of Boston and engaged in business with Andrew L. Russell, where he remained till 1835.

Returning to his native town, he was elected to the office of Register of Deeds in 1846, which office he held till his decease.

He was a genial, affable, and patient public officer and indefatigable explorer among the ancient and interesting records and annals of Colonial history. He was also the author of an invaluable compilation of the same. He was a conscientious and painstaking student of antiquarian lore, and one of the best authorities in anything pertaining to the history of the Pilgrims, and was ever ready to communicate the results of his knowledge to all enquirers. He was a member of the First Church, and a deacon for many years. In 1846 he published a volume entitled, "Guide to Plymouth and Recollections of the Pilgrims," a work of about 400 pages, containing local history, statistical and personal reminiscences of our pilgrim ancestors and their early homes, with an appendix of hymns and poems on subjects pertaining to the early history of the colony.

In the publication of the "Plymouth Colony Records," by the Commonwealth some years since, Mr. Russell rendered valuable aid in the preparation of the same, together with David Pulsifer, Esq., of Boston, to both of whom the public are indebted for the accuracy with which the work was completed.

When William H. Bartlett visited this country in search of information for his valuable work entitled "Pilgrim Fathers, or the Founders of New England," Mr. Russell furnished much of the information relating to Plymouth, Mass., and which was in his own language. Mr. Russell had a great fondness for Burial Hill, one of the prominent historical features of the town, and much frequented by visitors, and in 1858 caused to be prepared a complete list of inscriptions on the stones and monuments having reference to the publication of the same, but for some reason was never printed but the careful and accurate labors of which are now included within this volume.

We cannot better conclude this notice of Mr. Russell than by inserting the following well deserved notice found in the "Old Colony Memorial" at the time of his decease.

"By his death our town has lost one whose place as a student of our early history and a repository of knowledge of our places of local interest we know not how to fill. We shall miss his ever pleasant face, his never failing courtesy, his kindly manners, and his truly christian example. We shall miss him sadly as one to whom all questions of history or genealogy were referred, and no one ever applied to him without receiving a pleasant answer and a kindly interest in the object of their enquiries.

"The places that have known him will know him no more, but the memory of Mr. Russell will never be lost while 'Plymouth Rock and Burial Hill' are cherished and venerated."

On the easterly brow of Burial Hill, in a central location is a marble tablet which is represented by the accompanying engraving.

EDWARD WINSLOW WATSON.

We cannot close these sketches without giving a notice of one well remembered by a large number of our readers. But a few moments' sail in the harbor of Plymouth, in full view from Burial Hill, is situated the well-known spot called "Clark's Island," the place where the first Sabbath was observed by the Pilgrim fathers. Several years since, the writer had the pleasure of spending two days with the owner, one of the most enjoyable occasions he ever passed; and the following article by a Boston correspondent of the Springfield Republican has so well described the proprietor of the soil that we take great pleasure in placing it before our readers:

"If a statue were to be made of an ideal American—neither the dollar-worshipping Yankee, nor the over-cultivated æsthetic scholar, but the plain man of the people, rejoicing in his strength and in the boundless opportunities of his country, such as Walt Whitman would describe—the late Edward W. Watson of Clark's Island might have been the model. In him nature was everything, art and literature but accidents; and it made little difference that he had been all his days occupied with the simple pursuits and the narrow vicissitudes of a sea-side farmer and countryman, living within sight of Plymouth Rock. He was at home there, but so he would have been anywhere in the world, if sea room, open air, the key of the fields and the companionship of his fellowmen were allowed him. He was a Homeric person without the Homeric proclivity to fight and steal; and I have seen him slay and apportion a lamb as deftly and gravely as Agamemnon or any of his confederate chieftains. It was good, also, to see him walk barefoot, like an old Greek, along the ooze and into the foam of the sea, tending his boat or bringing his freight or passengers on shore when the tide was low. Such common acts he did with an apostolic and joyous unconcern, quite ignoring the modern refinements of costume and attitude—stepping from boat to boat as his friend Thoreau says of a very different person, 'with a divine ease and sureness.' Yet no fine gentleman was less embarrassed in good society than he—having been so long accustomed to the best society—that of his own family traditions, clear thoughts and generous purposes. The respect he won was like that the Highlander expressed when he said of his chief, 'Wherever the MacDonald sits is the head of the table.' If, now-and-then, a city lady eyed him askance, and questioned in her conventional mind the apparent propriety of his coat and shoes, it was soon revealed to her that this was a gentleman of such great courtesy that he might wear what he pleased without criticism. The homeliest surroundings were idolized by his romantic presence, and his island became a place where life, amid many inconveniences, took on an enchanted, charming aspect, for old and young.

"There blows the clover summer-long,

There figs grow ripe and full,
In orchards ring the robin's song,
The grapes climb up the wall;
The lily springs to deck the bride,
The melon creeps to see;
The slumbrous poppy nods beside
The whispering poplar tree.

The gleaming water, day and night,
Flashes along the shore,
And out beyond the double-light
Swells ocean's heavy roar.
The breezy hill is white with sheep,
The fields are green with corn—
But never deem the enchantment deep
Was of these beauties born.

Nor yet, though more endeared than these,
Was all the charm from thee,
Old friend, that walked amidst thy trees
As stately and as free,
For thee that sweet enchantment found,
Though lord of isle and stream;
Thee, too, did magic walls surround,
Thy life a gentle dream.

With joy, with thee, we hailed the spot
Where sorrow never dwelt,
Where all things ill were soon forgot,
And only bliss was felt.
We heard thy wise and laughing words,
Thou lord of isle and stream,
Mint with the music of the birds,
Fresh breeze and sunny beam.

Now sadly parting from the strand
In thy delaying boat,
We bid farewell with voice and hand
To thee returning not.
No more on this brief voyage bound,
Thou sail'st a brighter wave
Than thine, which, sighing, circles round
The stillness of thy grave.

"Such a life as Edward W. Watson's, without being unfaithful to any duty, and with no conspicuous greatness or success, was like a long poem of fourscore stanzas—each quatrain a revolving year, in which winter rhymed with summer and spring with autumn in a pleasing melody, now lyric, now idyllic, now pastoral, and sometimes grave and diadatic, but always with a genial moral. Wordsworth, in his 'Mathew' and in other sketches, has tried to describe such men. But they do not come to full maturity in England, I suppose, lacking the perfect freedom and unconstraint of our American country life.

'Much doth nature's love excel
To the souls that never fell,
To swains that live in happiness,
And do well because they please,
Who walk in ways that are unfamed,
And feats achieve before they're named.'

"Living thus embosomed in poetry and on the most friendly terms with nature in all her aspects, it was natural that he should write verses—but they had less merit than his most casual remark, which was sure to be worth remembering. It was true of him as of that friend of his who said—

'My life has been the poem I would have writ,
But I could not both live and utter it.'

"What he wrote was sometimes printed, and if collected in a volume would pleasantly remind us of the writer, especially if along with them should be presented his handsome portrait, adorned with thick white hair. He was not so remarkable in appearance as his neighbor on the mainland, Daniel Webster, who used to come sailing down to Marshfield into the waters where Mr. Watson bore sway; but he was a more wholesome, buoyant and attractive person, and one who lived on better terms with himself; renouncing wealth and ambition, and contenting himself with the sovereignty of his own island and its waters, and the companionship of his friends. But better than anything that he wrote would be his daily conversation, if that could be preserved as the table-talk of more famous men have been. He talked as the birds sing and the breezes blow—without forethought or restraint, and with all the freshness of boyhood, while he uttered the mellow wisdom of age. But why strive longer to describe the indescribable? for such was he.

'Thou soul of God's best earthly mould,
Thou happy soul! and can it be
That these three words of glittering gold
Are all that must remain of thee?'
